TAFT WARNS PARTY FROM ALUMNI TABLE

If It Does Not Keep Its Promises It Will Become a Minority, He Says.

YALE CHEERS STATEMENT

It Came in the Midst of a Humorous Speech—Praises World Cruise of Fleet.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 30.—President Taft paused in the course of an after-dinner speech to 1,800 graduates of Yale, gathered at the annual alumni dinner to-day, to sound a serious note of warning to Congress and to the leaders of the Republican Party. The President declared that if the Republican Party failed now to live up to its promises and the expectations of the people, it would be relegated to the position of a minority opposition.

Mr. Taft had been speaking humorously of his own college days here under the elms, a fact which made his sudden change to a serious tone all the more impressive to his hearers.

The President made no effort to explain his warnings. The Yale men caught his meaning and the significance that his remarks came at this time of the tariff debate. They stood upon their feet and cheered for several minutes. Mr. Taft had been speaking of Secretary of War Dickinson, a Democrat, upon whom Yale to-day conferred an honorary degree. He taunted the Democracy with the best of good humor as to its present-day condition, and this led him into the declaration as to his own party.

"Just to show," the President said amid laughter, "that we have troubles of our own."

Various Kinds of Democrats.

In the beginning Mr. Taft paid compliments to others who had received honorary degrees. Reaching Secretary Dickinson, the President said:

"You went south of the Mason and Dixon line to get a Secretary of War to whom to give a degree. It is well that you did, because he is going to build the Panama Canal, and other universities will follow where you got in early. One of the difficulties that has confronted Brother Dick, son out in Chicago, where he has a temporary residence, was a discussion as to what constituted an orthodox Democrat, and whether really he ought to be counted as a Democrat if he allowed himself to go into a Republican Cabinet.

"Well, when you come to discuss what is a Democrat these days, you are presented with very much the same difficulty that I have before me now in giving certain rules for the construction of the pure food law as to what whisky is. They say there is 'straight' whisky, and then there is 'rectified' whisky, and then there is 'imitation' whisky.

"Now I speak with a good deal of hesitation in saying whether my friend Dickinson is a 'straight' Democrat or a 'rectified' Democrat. I would not dare to say in his presence that he was an 'imitation' Democrat.

"The truth is, and speaking seriously, I consider myself most fortunate that I was able to obtain for that important place in my Cabinet a man who represented the highest ideals of the South, who knew no section in his patriotism, and whose coming into the Cabinet was significant of the friendliness of a large element in that Southern section that it is in my heart to bring close to the North.

Like His Majesty's Opposition.

"Now, my dear friends, in suggesting differences among Democrats I am far from ignoring some difficulties that there are on our side. I remember in 1904 that Mr. Charles Francis Adams gave what I may call a perfectly good Adams reason for the election of the Democratic candidate over the Republican candidate.

"He said that one of the essentials of a successful free Government was an able, patriotic, and efficient opposition, and that as the Democratic Party had utterly failed in reaching that ideal, he was in favor of putting the Republican Party in that place.

"Now, I venture to say, that while that may not be the reason which shall move the American people, it is true that if the Republican Party does not live up to its promises and what the people expect of it, it will be relegated to a position like that of his Majesty's opposition. And, therefore, I may say by way of caveat that we have troubles of our own."

Before he began his speech Mr. Taft was greeted with all the vim of an alumni dinner. This greeting was renewed when, turning to President Hadley, he addressed himself to "Mr. President and fellow-Yale men."

The earlier parts of Mr. Taft's speech before he reached the sections in which he spoke of Secretary Dickinson and warned his party, were:

"Since March 4 I have learned a number of things, and I am making no reference to the Weather Bureau, either. I have learned that in the opinion of the American people one of the chief functions of the President of the United States is to increase the box receipts and the sale of excursion tickets. I am not here, and am not invited here, on any such notion. I have come because I could not keep coming, to be a Yale man, and to be part of Yale.

"You will think possibly before the end of this Presidential term that I am as inevitable a presence at the alumni dinner as the ham and chicken that we are all so fond of. I hope I may have the pleasure for a great many years of listening to the kindly benediction that we all value so much, and that we all go ahead feeling better for, from President Dwight.

Care in Conferring Degrees.

"I have been as punctual as circumstances would admit, at the meetings of the corporation, but circumstances always prevent my attending those meetings at which honorary degrees are conferred, and therefore I do not hesitate to take a position of criticism toward those degrees if necessary. The power to confer them is one that the university ought to exercise with great care. It is one that shows whether the university is up to date with the things that are keeping pace in fields of endeavor and success or not.

"Now, I want to congratulate the President of Yale University on the degree which was conferred upon the President of Harvard University in such beautifully felicitous, and friendly terms as those which he used this morning. It is a man warm to Harvard as some men seldom do. Then, too, it meets with approval that we orthodox men like should recognize and seem to approve the liberality of the theological school of Harvard.

"I may also note in the relations of the university what has previously been noted on this occasion a number of times, that that courteous convention by which Yale always loses on Harvard class day at Cambridge, and Harvard always loses on Yale class day at New Haven, is still maintained.

"Then the recognizing as a Master of Arts of that musical critic, Brother Krehbiel, who, from that chair of power in The Tribune office at New York, has marked down composers and elevated musical artists, we may well concur in and approve. I can recollect—you who do not understand music as we do in Cincinnati may not understand—the power that he exercised. I can recollect that at musical festivities held in Cincinnati, the word of Krehbiel as to whether it was a worthy occasion or not, was listened to with the utmost anxiety, and when he had either the bad taste or the candor to say that it was not worthy of the city, he escaped only with his life.

Praises World Cruise.

"And then the corporation took up the question of the navy, and I assume from its action, although the spokesman of the university was a little bit chary on that subject, that it approved the voyage of the sixteen battleships around the world, and that it recognized in Admiral Sperry the supreme ability, the supreme equipoise, and the determination which was able to meet the requirements of the custodian of $150,000,000 of United States property, which, if lost, could not be restored in more than a decade, and I wish to say with reference to that trip, that, while it was critiised at the time, there is no single order of my predecessor—many of whose orders tended so much to the peace of the world—which, in my judgment, tended so much to the peace of the world as the order by which he sent around—not a messenger of war, but as messengers of peace—these wonderful mechanisms known as the sixteen battleships of the United States."

The President spoke in the warmest terms of praise and affection for Prof. William G. Sumner, who, in retiring from the Yale Faculty after many years of active service, was honored with a Doctor of Laws degree. From Prof. Sumner his remarks led to Secretary Dickinson, and then, in concluding his speech, the President said:

"It is a great comfort to come from Washington into the academic shades like this, whether it be to an alumni dinner or to a corporation meeting, to come into contact with the President of this university, who is carrying it on with such exceptional ability and such exceptional success. We occasionally hear echoes from various directions of the dreadful condition that exists in universities, but it won't turn a single Yale man, and I am sure a single Harvard man, from allegiance to the university of his choice—and to his alma mater—and to the conviction, well-founded, that there is no atmosphere with a higher moral inspiration than that which you receive at the old university."

The other speakers at the dinner were President Hadley, Secretary Dickinson, Dr. Timothy Dwight, former President of Yale, and Bishop Lawrence of Massachusetts, who is an Overseer of Harvard.

WITHDRAW CARS FOR WOMEN.

Those on McAdoo Trains Not Much Used and Will Be Discontinued.

The Hudson & Manhattan Railroad Company decreed yesterday that "women's cars" should no longer be operated in the Hudson tube, and mere man will once more be on an equal footing with the other sex in the McAdoo tunnels. Mr. McAdoo had this notice posted in the Hudson River tunnel cars and at the different stations along the line:

> On and after July 1, 1909, the exclusive car for women operated from Hoboken to New York between 7:30 and 8:30 A. M. and from New York to Hoboken between 5:30 and 6:30 P. M. will be discontinued, as the patronage does not warrant further maintenance of this service.

The history of this order dates back to last March, when a number of women in this city, incensed at the conditions in the Subway during the rush hours, appealed to the Public Service Commission to compel the addition of a separate car to each train reserved for their special benefit. The Interborough refused to install separate cars, but Mr. McAdoo agreed to make the experiment on his line.

Special cars for women were put on the trains on March 31 for two hours in the morning and again for the same period in the evening rush hours. At first the women seemed pleased at the departure. It took but three months to demonstrate the fact that woman preferred all the crowding, jamming, and other discomforts of the old system to riding in isolation and security.

Mr. McAdoo hazarded this explanation last night:

"When the cars for the exclusive use of women were established on our line on March 31 last, we stated that it was an experiment, and that the company reserved the right to discontinue them if they should not be sufficiently patronized. We have made a long and thorough test, and regret to find that there is not a sufficient demand on the part of women for an exclusive car. The patronage has constantly diminished. We would have made these cars a permanent feature of our operation if the women had shown by their use of them that they are wanted or needed."

GOING ABROAD TRUNKLESS.

These New York and Chicago Girls Will Carry Only Suit Cases.

A party of New York and Chicago girls will sail to-day for a tour of Europe, each carrying all her possessions in a dressuit case. The party will sail on the Hamburg-American Line steamship Hamburg, and, landing at Naples, they will travel through Italy, visiting Rome, Genoa, Geneva, and other cities, and then going to Paris.

The trip will last sixty-four days, and during that time the girls will only add to their traveling outfit substitute articles for those they will take abroad with them.

The young women have been sitting up nights trying to figure how to get all the things they want to take in their suit cases. The question of hats was settled by Miss Mary Ryan. She devised a system of relays of trimmings. One hat will be carried, but several small bundles of trimmings, and by the use of these the same hat can be made ready for use on Sundays, weekdays, and holidays.

Miss Ryan, who, with many of the party, attended the performance of "The Motor Girl" at the Lyric Theatre last night, said that all the articles of dress would be of silk, as that material could be packed into the smallest space.

"We have it all planned out," she said. "The average tourist has to pay most of her attention abroad to looking after her many trunks. Not so with us. We want to spend all our time seeing things and not taking care of trunks."

The Day Line Str. "Albany" will run to the Intercollegiate Boat Races at Po'keepsie, July 2, returning immediately after races. See exc. advs.—Adv.

INTERBOROUGH PLAN TO SPEND $100,000,000

CITY MUST BUY TUNNEL

And Permit Third Tracking of Elevated Lines—J. P. Morgan & Co. May Be Financial Agents.

The Interborough Rapid Transit Company, through Theodore P. Shonts, its President, sent yesterday afternoon to the Public Service Commission its amended proposal for the transit development of the city based on the extension of the Interborough's own lines. The proposal covers the construction by the Interborough of many miles of new subways and the third tracking of the Second and Third Avenue elevated lines and of the Ninth Avenue elevated line south of Fourteenth Street. The sale of the Steinway tunnel to the city is another phase of the proposal, to which is added a plan of extending a spur track from the Second Avenue elevated line over the new Queensboro Bridge.

The Interborough's offer goes into the technical details of the plans of the company and was accompanied by a statement by President Shonts explaining the proposals. The offer is made, of course, pursuant to the amendment to the Rapid Transit act passed by the last Legislature embodying the indeterminate franchise principle, and the Interborough desires to have the term of its operating franchises on the new subways to correspond to that of the lease of the existing Subway, which has sixty-five years to run.

The law provides that the term of such a franchise shall be fixed so as to cover the amortization period of the securities issued, and that the commission and any company bidding shall determine the period of expiry between them. The city, however, has a right to buy at any time after ten years, and to this restriction the Interborough accedes, stipulating, however, in the case of the elevated extensions, that in case the city acquires them it shall pay for the easements and damages assumed by the company at the time of construction.

The Interborough's Proposals.

The offer of the Interborough comprises the following proposals:

A four-track subway from Times Square on what is known as the Seventh Avenue route to Canal Street, and an extension with two tracks under West Broadway to the Battery.

The third-tracking of the Ninth Avenue elevated road from Fourteenth Street to Battery Place, so that express trains from Harlem can have their own track all the way downtown.

A two-track subway through Canal Street, over the Manhattan Bridge, to a connection with the Interborough's present Subway at Nevins Street, one station this side of Atlantic Avenue, Brooklyn.

The third-tracking of the Second and Third Avenue elevated lines and an extension of the Second Avenue line so as to bring its tracks into Brooklyn Bridge without the crossover of its trains on to the Third Avenue tracks at Chatham Square.

The sale of the Steinway tunnel to the city at cost, this figure being determined by arbitration, and the establishment of a five-cent fare from the easterly end of the Steinway tunnel to any point reachable on the Interborough's subways in Manhattan.

A spur of the Second Avenue tracks over the Queensboro Bridge, with a five-cent fare to any point reachable on the Interborough's elevated lines in the city.

A four-track subway from an intersection with the present Subway, about Thirty-sixth Street and Park Avenue, to Forty-sixth Street, and thence a two-track express subway under Third Avenue to join the present Lenox Avenue Subway branch at 149th Street, and a two-track local subway under Lexington Avenue to the Harlem River.

The extension of the present west side elevated from its terminus at 155th Street across the Macomb's Dam bridge and up Jerome Avenue to 194th Street.

Tunnel Must be Bought.

The Interborough is willing to separate so much of its offer as pertains to the construction of new elevated tracks from that which relates to the construction of subways and accept either the elevated extension or the Subway extensions or both, as the commission may determine. But that part of the offer which relates to subways and the sale of the Steinway Tunnel the Interborough holds as a unit, and it is all or nothing in respect to this matter.

The Interborough also stipulates that the title to the subways to be constructed by it shall rest in the city and that the city shall assume all liability to abutting property owners, except damages occasioned by the negligence of the Interborough itself. The Interborough asks exemption from all taxation on physical property, including equipment taxes and franchise taxes, and suggests that if the courts impose such taxes the city ought to assume them. The letter of Mr. Shonts to the Public Service Commission remarks in this connection:

"I think it must be conceded that no private company can safely undertake to build new subways with the increased cost of construction now prevailing, unless relieved of the burden of dealing with property owners for right of way and of the heavy franchise taxes which might be imposed on the property if privately owned."

Cost Estimated at $100,000,000.

There is no estimate in either Mr. Shonts's letter to the commission, or his statement to the public as to the probable cost of the Interborough's plan or as to the financial arrangements behind it. The cost is roughly estimated at between $75,000,000 and $100,000,000. It has been reported that the firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., which has but recently taken $10,000,000 Interborough bonds pursuant to the plan under which the Morgan firm bought $35,000,000 Interborough notes not long ago, would handle the financing of the proposition. In well-informed banking quarters yesterday this theory was received with considerable credence, although no official confirmation was forthcoming.

Mr. Shonts made a statement, of which this is a part:

"If the plans I have proposed are accepted there will be added to New York's existing rapid transit facilities, as immediately as human energy and intelligence can contrive, sixty-eight and a half miles of new track. The city will then have a subway on both sides of Manhattan Island with three transverse connections.

INDEPENDENTS SIGN SCALE

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Penn., June 30.—Twenty thousand men employed at the various tin plate plants of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company were compelled to cease work to-night by an order issued by P. J. McArdle, President of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel, and Tin Plate Workers. The union men in the plants at New Castle and Sharon, Penn.; Youngstown, Bridgeport, Martin's Ferry, and Cambridge, Ohio; Wheeling, W. Va., and Ellwood, Ind., quit work, the last turn going off at midnight. Tin plate operatives work in three turns of eight hours each.

At the Etna-Standard and the Laughlin plants, Bridgeport, Ohio, many of the men refused to report for work this morning, and only ten of the forty-six mills were operated throughout the day, so that the strike was actually begun to-day.

President McArdle of the Amalgamated Association was busy to-day with the Wage Committee, signing up the scale of the independent producers of sheet and tin-plate works, and he had no time to give the strike attention. He issued an order as follows:

> All men must cease work after the third turn, June 30. P. J. McARDLE.

Walter Larkin, Vice President of the tin division of the Amalgamated Association, who spent several days in New Castle and vicinity, called at the headquarters to-day, and stated that he was confident that every union man in the Shenango and Mahoning Valley mills would quit work to-night.

Advices from other mills affected indicated that the men were a unit in their opposition to the open-shop order.

The workers were given an opportunity to vote on the strike, and out of more than 5,000 votes the Amalgamated gave out that only two men had voted against a strike.

At New Castle, Penn., the merchants held a meeting yesterday and passed resolutions to the effect that the strikers would receive no credit at the stores and no sympathy from the citizens. This is due to the fact that the tin-plate workers were idle for almost one year, and only recently returned to work, and most of them are in debt to the tradesmen. The New Castle delegates to the Amalgamated meeting in Pittsburg voted against a strike, but the men at the mills have since voted to quit work.

President McArdle said that he had hope of inducing the non-union workers to join the Amalgamated members in the strike, as the American Company has reduced wages about 3 per cent.

The independent sheet and tin plate manufacturers to-day signed the wage scale for the year under the terms of the year just past, which is a little higher than that offered by the American Company.

The American Company to-day surprised the workers by announcing that the plants at Demmler, Penn., and South Side, Pittsburg, will be started in full to-morrow. These plants have been closed eighteen months and two years, respectively. About 1,200 men will be employed. The strike will not effect any of the plants in Allegheny County.

The Republic Iron and Steel Company's wage scale expires to-night, and the union men quit work at midnight. There is no dispute between the Republic Company and the Amalgamated, however, and repairs will be made at the various plants during the shut-down, and later the scale may be signed.

The Western Bar Iron Association, composed of concerns, competitors of the Republic Company, signed the scale and will continue at work.

BROOKLYN'S AUXILIARY BISHOP

ROME, June 30.—The Rev. George W. Mundelein, Chancellor of the Diocese of Brooklyn, has been appointed Titular Bishop of Loryma and Auxiliary Bishop of Brooklyn.

The Right Rev. George W. Mundelein was born in Brooklyn about forty-one years ago, and received his preliminary education at Manhattan College. In 1889 he was sent to Rome, where he took a theological course at the Propaganda. After being ordained in 1895 he returned to Brooklyn, and almost immediately was appointed assistant secretary to Bishop McDonnell, serving in that capacity until Jan. 1, 1898, when he was made Chancellor of the diocese, succeeding the Rev. James H. Mitchell.

In December, 1906, Father Mundelein received a direct commission from the Pope, and was designated as "Domestic Prelate of His Holiness," which carries with it the titles "Right Reverend" and "Monsignor." In October, 1907, he was made a member of the Ancient Academy of the Arcadi, an honor which, up to that time, it is said, had been enjoyed by no other person in America. The following year he received the degree of Doctor of Sacred Theology from the Congregation of the Faith in Rome.

Mgr. Mundelein visited Rome last December as a representative of Bishop McDonnell and the laity of the Brooklyn diocese, and had a private audience with the Pope.

LOEB SEIZES SHIP AS A FILIBUSTER

ORDERS FROM WASHINGTON

The Ethelwold, a small and apparently harmless little steamer, lying at the outer edge of the shipping which skirts the South Brooklyn water front, was held up by United States customs officers last night on suspicion that the vessel was about to engage in a filibustering expedition against the Republic of Santo Domingo.

The order to detain the steamer was received last evening from Assistant Secretary McHarg of the Department of Commerce and Labor at Washington, and was promptly executed by Collector Loeb. The Washington advices said that M. Leger, Minister from Haiti, had complained to the State Department that the British steamship Ethelwold was believed to have been engaged by Jose St. Pierre Giordani and Gen. Juan Jiminez, Santo Domingans, to aid in a filibustering expedition.

Within an hour after the receipt of the order Collector Loeb had Chief Inspector Bradley take two customs officers to the little ship. They were placed aboard with orders not to let her sail. The Ethelwold at the time was lying with a considerable list to port, tied up at the end of a long pier at the foot of Twenty-sixth Street, South Brooklyn.

The engineer and two members of the crew, who were the first persons discovered in the darkness, declared that Capt. Brown and all others in authority were ashore for the night.

"When do you expect to sail?" was asked.

"To-night or to-morrow," volunteered one, and "Not for a week yet," persisted another. Both were English sailors.

"Sydney," was the reply.

"Sydney, Nova Scotia?"

"No, Australia," they declared in concert.

"What cargo are you taking there?"

"Were you aboard when she was loaded?"

None would admit they were, but at this moment a white-capped customs officer appeared.

He was Inspector William E. Dodge and explained that he and Inspector R. W. Reulberger had come aboard scarcely an hour before by order of Chief Inspector Bradley to see that the vessel did not sail. He said no inspection had been made of the cargo, and none would be undertaken last night, and that although he knew nothing definitely of any filibustering, he did know that something of the sort was suspected. He added that when he came aboard the agent of the boat, whose name he did not know, appeared greatly agitated and denied that he had any intention of clearing his vessel for some time to come.

But the customs officer pointed out that full steam was up, a matter which the chief engineer was unable to account for more than to say, "Those were my orders."

The customs officers suggested that the list to the port was affected to make the vessel appear unseaworthy, and indicate that she was not ready for sailing. They said that three men were on board when they first arrived, all with Captain's papers—all expert mariners, and, as one of the men admitted, experts in handling firearms.

"Yes," one of the customs officers said, "the crew of a dozen or fifteen were aboard when we arrived. Most of them were English sailors, and had been shipped only a few days ago. Of course they would not have been aboard to-night with steam up unless the boat was about to sail. We have not been authorized to make any inspection. That probably will be made to-morrow."

The Ethelwold is a steamer of little more than 500 tons, and has been around New York for several months. She was, until recently, in Erie Basin, and is said to have loaded at Francis & Bannerman's warehouse. At Bannerman's to-night deck hands admitted that firearms were sometimes handled there, but none knew of loading the Ethelwold.

José St. Pierre Giordani, whom the Washington advices implicated in the alleged filibuster, was former Consul General in New York from Santo Domingo, and was later the agent of the formidable conspiracy against Haiti, Santo Domingo, and Cuba. He was convicted in New York about a year ago and sentenced to six months' imprisonment.

Gen. Juan Jiminez was a former President of Santo Domingo and leader of the Jiministas plot to overthrow the little republic.

SUSPECTS A CONSPIRACY.

Washington Hears That Dominican Politicians Are Engineering a Coup.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—Suspected of preparing for a filibustering expedition to the Island of Santo Domingo, the British steamship Ethelwold, which has been lying in the Erie Basin, Brooklyn, is, if she has not sailed already, to be refused clearance papers, according to instructions sent to the Collector of the Port of New York to-day by Ormsby McHarg, acting Secretary of Commerce and Labor.

The vessel, it was reported, has been lying close to the firearms warehouse of Francis & Bannerman. This aroused suspicion, and the circumstances were communicated to the State Department here by Señor Sannon, the Haitian Minister, as one merely interested in a neighboring republic.

Capt. Brown of the Ethelwold is believed to be acting in conjunction with Giordania and Jiminez, two Dominican politicians, now said to be in the United States. It is thought that the plan was to have munitions of war carried to sea on the Ethelwold, and then transferred to some other vessel.

In the absence of the Dominican Minister, Señor Fiallo, Chargé d'Affaires, said to-night that he had no knowledge of any such expedition. Further than saying that all was peaceful on the island the Haitian Minister declined to discuss the matter.

FREE GOVERNMENT TRIUMPH.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. JAMES, L. I., June 30.—Supreme Court Justice Gaynor, on hearing of the Mayor's action at his country home here to-night, issued a statement attacking present and past police administrations afresh. Here is the statement:

"I would not like to say anything specific of the Mayor's report, as I have not read it. The great thing is that it has been established in the person of this weak and uninfluential milk boy that there is no place under our system of government for an autocrat. It cannot be too often said, and ought to be pasted in the hat of every official, and especially in that of every Mayor and Police Commissioner, that ours is a government of laws and not of men.

"No official, however high, is above the law. He has no right or lawful power to do anything except the law permits him to do it, and then only in the manner and way which the law limits and prescribes to him. That is our government. The opposite is despotism. For an official to set himself above the law and do as he likes is despotism.

"This case is only the beginning of the restoration of free government to the people of New York and the teaching of its police rulers that they are not above the law. You cannot rule a free people in a lawless way. First of all, it is for officials to keep the written law and not trample on and defy it, and set at naught the rights of others."

THREE SHOT IN LOCKED ROOM

Special to The New York Times.

NORTON, Va., June 30.—The town of Middlesboro was startled this morning by the rapid firing of a pistol. The hour was early, and it was some time before the officials broke open a room, and found therein two men and a woman dying from pistol wounds, with the weapon lying between the two men.

Stretched on her face lay Mrs. James Bradshaw of Norton, a bullet wound in her breast. Some distance away on the floor lay J. B. Mays of this place and R. F. Culbertson of Coeburn.

It is known that Mrs. Bradshaw went to Middlesboro yesterday accompanied by one of the men, though no one here knows which of the two escorted her. Later the second man joined the party, and the three were seen together during the day. Nothing was heard from them until the shooting.

It is believed that Mays did the shooting, turning the pistol on himself. The condition of all three was such that no information could be got from them. Both men have families. Mays was an engineer and Culbertson was foreman of the Coeburn electric light plant.

JEROME ON A CANOE TRIP.

He and Assistant District Attorney Murphy in the Woods for a Month.

District Attorney Jerome and Assistant District Attorney Murphy left New York yesterday for a month's canoeing trip in the Adirondacks. They will leave everything except camping necessities at Old Forge and will spend a greater part of the month in the woods.

Before returning Mr. Jerome will probably stop at Elizabethtown to see Judge Hand, who heard the charges preferred against the District Attorney, after which he will stay for a few days at Schroon Lake Inn.

Letter Commending Biltmore Postmistress Involves Her in Political Fight

Special to The New York Times.

ASHEVILLE, June 30.—Through writing a letter, without thought of political consequences, commending the conduct of the Biltmore Post Office by Mrs. Julie Reed, a widow, and indorsing her for reappointment, the name of Mrs. George W. Vanderbilt has been drawn into a hot political contest over the place between the partisans of Congressman J. G. Grant and the Republican organization.

The Congressman has indorsed Byron Luther for the office, and the organization has taken up Mrs. Reed's cause to beat him.

The organization people say Mrs. Vanderbilt's letter shows that the Biltmore estate influence is with them, while the Grant partisans say they have the support of the common people.

INSPECTOR RUSSELL HIT

Mayor McClellan's eagerly awaited decision on the charges made by Supreme Court Justice Gaynor against Commissioner Bingham and the present régime in the Police Department, arising out of the Duffy case, was made public last night.

In a sixty-page statement, in which he minutely reviews the evidence taken in his investigation of the case and the law covering the whole subject of the Rogues' Gallery photography, the Mayor upholds Justice Gaynor's declaration that a great injustice has been done to the Duffy boy by including his picture in the gallery, and directs that it be taken out at once. Although carefully refraining from any criticism of the Police Commissioner personally, the Mayor condemns the "inefficiency and maladministration" of the Police Department in Brooklyn," and demands immediate changes in the department.

The changes include the removal forthwith of Third Deputy Police Commissioner Hanson, who, the Mayor says, "by his abusive language, lack of control, and inability to exercise judicial functions, has cost the city many thousands of dollars"; of Commissioner Bingham's secretary, Daniel G. Slattery; the reduction of Borough Inspector Russell to a Captaincy, and the restoration of police autonomy to Brooklyn under Deputy Commissioner Baker.

The Mayor further orders that his special investigator, Inspector Kelly, be made an "Inspector at Large" of the police force and detailed to the Mayor's office, and that complaints of police administration be forwarded to him; also that Inspector Hollohan be made Borough Inspector, in charge of Brooklyn in Russell's place.

The Mayor left the City Hall for Princeton before his statement was made public, leaving word that he had nothing to add to it. Police Commissioner Bingham learned of the decision before leaving Headquarters for the day, but declined to comment on it or to say what action he would take. None of the other persons named would say a word.

Commissioner Bingham, Deputy Hanson, Deputy Woods, and Secretary Slattery were in conference most of last night at Gen. Bingham's apartments in the Iroquois. At midnight the four were still talking. Mr. Hanson sent out word that no statement would be made until to-day.

About the same time last night Police Headquarters became greatly stirred up by the appearance of four Central Office detectives, two of whom took up their stand before the door of Commissioner Bingham's office and two before that of Deputy Commissioner Hanson's office. The detectives declined to tell by whose orders they were there or for what purpose they were stationed at the doors.

Justice Gaynor at his home in St. James, L. I., last night hailed the Mayor's action as a triumph for free Government.

"It has now been established," he said, "that there is no place under our system of Government for an autocrat. No official, however high, is above the law."

The Mayor's Conclusions.

After thinking over this matter with the greatest care, I am led to the conclusion that as Mayor of the City of New York I should not order the police to stop taking photographs of people arrested and accused of crime or who have been indicted by Grand Juries. That grave injustice may occur, the Duffy case has demonstrated, but I feel that it is not the taking of the photograph that has given cause to the injustice but the inefficiency and maladministration of the Police Department in the Borough of Brooklyn that has been the cause of the injury to the Duffy boy and which has held this branch of the force up to public condemnation and reproach.

"I have again and again suggested to the Police Commissioner the necessity of not leaving this great subdivision of New York City to the control of professional police officers. I have argued that it is of the utmost necessity to have at the head of large divisions of the police a civilian, removed from the so-called "system" as far as possible, who can intelligently check excess of power and the ever-growing desire of the professional policeman to become arrogant and overbearing to the citizens, of whom he is the servant.

"The late decision of the Court of Appeals affirming Mr. Justice Burr in his commitment of the head of the detective force in Brooklyn for contempt of court, and the public condemnation by District Attorney Clarke of the so-called "system" in a murder trial, where he was forced to state, to the shame of this branch of the Police Department, that police officers sought to protect a criminal in their own ranks, instead of aiding the prosecuting officer to bring the prisoner to the bar, as well as facts in the Duffy case, lead me to the inevitable conclusion that the experiment of the Police Commissioner in reducing Brooklyn to the rank of a precinct, with a professional policeman in charge, is an absolute failure.

The Changes He Orders.

"The defiance by Acting Captain Kuhne of the writ of habeas corpus and the almost thwarted efforts of the District At-

...ney to bring a policeman to the bar of justice for murder and have him tried by a jury are conclusive evidence against the Commissioner's experiment. For these reasons I have decided to overrule the Commissioner on his theory of the administration of the department in Brooklyn, and do hereby order and direct:

"First—That on the receipt of this communication the Police Commissioner immediately place in charge of the Boroughs of Brooklyn and Queens, with all his former authority as Trial Commissioner as well as otherwise, First Deputy Police Commissioner Baker, and thus restore this great division of the city to its former police administration at the hands of one of its citizens. This gives back to Brooklyn its autonomy in police matters and carries out the theory of home rule, which the Police Commissioner should never have violated.

"Second—I further order the Commissioner to designate First Deputy Commissioner Baker and Inspector McCafferty to entertain all applications to take photographs and measurements from the Rogues' Gallery and rule thereon.

"Third—I order the Police Commissioner to remove the photograph of George B. Duffy of 237 Wyckoff Street, Brooklyn, from the Rogues' Gallery and return all photograph negatives and Bertillon measurements to his father, George E. Duffy.

"Fourth—I order the Police Commissioner to forthwith remove from office Deputy Police Commissioner Hanson and Secretary Slattery for their implication in the case of the Duffy boy, when, as lay members of the Commissioner's staff, they should have been the first to check this grievance as far back as March, 1909, when the matter was presented by Mr. Justice Gaynor. It was Deputy Commissioner Hanson who appears to have taken the affidavit of the unfortunate woman who was used to sustain the police theory of the case.

"Another reason that has led me to make this order in regard to Deputy Commissioner Hanson is the complaints of the Appellate Divisions of both departments brought to my attention, that by his abusive language, lack of control, and inability to exercise judicial functions he has cost the City of New York many thousands of dollars by the reinstatement of police officials removed on charges, but whom the courts have reinstated because of the evidence of passion, prejudice, and partiality exercised by this Deputy Commissioner.

"It was Secretary Slattery who, in a memorandum to the Commissioner, and which was transmitted to me by the Commissioner, stated that the unfortunate woman had perjured herself when she stated in the Seibel case that she was in the Brooklyn Hotel with him when Seibel was assaulted.

"For these reasons I direct the immediate removal of these two men.

Stover Put in Hanson's Place.

"Fifth—I further direct the Police Commissioner to appoint as Third or Trial Deputy Assistant Corporation Counsel Stover in place of Deputy Commissioner Hanson.

"Sixth—I further direct the Police Commissioner to submit to me the name of the successor to Mr. Slattery, and only appoint such successor on my approval, the Secretary of the Police Commissioner having ceased to be a mere clerical aid, but by orders of the Police Commissioner designated as a 'staff officer.'

"Seventh—I further direct that Borough Inspector Russell, who has been in charge of the Boroughs of Brooklyn and Queens, be reduced to the rank of Captain and assigned to a precinct in the Bronx, for the good of the service, because of false statements made to me.

"Eighth—Formerly the Police Commissioner submitted to me for approval the names of the Captains that he desired to designate as Inspectors, but of late this submission of names has been discontinued. I therefore direct that the designations of Captains as Inspectors, the reduction of Inspectors to Captains, and the assignment of Inspectors be submitted to me for my approval, as heretofore.

"Ninth—I order that Inspector Thomas J. Kelly be assigned and designated as Inspector at Large, with headquarters in the Mayor's office at City Hall. That all complaints received at Police Headquarters be immediately copied and a copy sent forthwith to me. That after these complaints have been investigated by the police authorities copies of the reports thereon be also sent forthwith to me. The four officers now assigned to the Mayor's office with Inspector Kelly are to be continued here until further orders.

"Tenth—On the report of District Attorney Clarke of Kings County that Inspector Hollohan was the only officer in authority that aided him in the trial of Officer Dillon of the One Hundred and Forty-ninth Precinct for murder, I order that Inspector Hollohan be made Borough Inspector under Deputy Commissioner Baker, in place of Inspector Russell, herewith reduced.

"Eleventh—I further direct that the above orders be carried into effect immediately after the receipt of this communication, and the Police Commissioner report compliance therewith in twelve hours to me."

Bingham's Resignation Expected.

Copies of the Duffy decision, delivered to the Mayor's office by the printer in the afternoon, were given to the waiting reporters about 7 o'clock, with the information that the Mayor had gone to Princeton and would not return until today. The information contained in the decision spread about the City Hall rapidly, and was discussed on all sides. The prevailing opinion among the politicians was that Commissioner Bingham's resignation would be in the Mayor's hands within twenty-four hours.

It was pointed out that the Police Commissioner had not visited the Mayor's office for weeks, whereas it had formerly been his rule to drop in about every other day. One of the many rumors was that the Mayor intended to appoint Park Commissioner Henry Smith to the Police Commissionership if Commissioner Bingham should resign. Color was given to this report by the fact that earlies in the afternoon Mr. Smith had called at the Mayor's office and had a long talk with him.

The earlier part of the Mayor's statement is taken up by a recital of the events which led up to his investigation of the Duffy case after he had received the letter of complaint from Justice Gaynor. The Mayor quotes Acting Captain Kuhne's summarization of the police evidence against Duffy as follows:

> I am advised by several of the detectives George B. Duffy is a well known general thief, and is also known to the officers of the 140th and 147th Precincts as a member of the White Hand gang, who congregated in the vicinity of Third Avenue and Battle Street, Brooklyn.

"From the evidence I have taken," says the Mayor, "it appears that this report was received at Police Headquarters by Deputy Commissioner Wood, who assures me that he acted merely as the transmitter thereof, and personally handed the same to Police Commissioner Bingham; that thereafter the entire correspondence between Commissioner Bingham and Mr. Justice Gaynor was conducted by the Police Commissioner."

The Mayor notes that is a second report of the various arrests of Duffy, which was submitted by Acting Captain Kuhne, the charge against Duffy at the time of his first arrest of being a suspicious person, was changed to that of plundering the store of Charrot & Henry, at 100 Flatbush Avenue. The police blotter entry of this offense, continues the Mayor, was that of being a suspicious person, and the short affidavit on which Duffy was arraigned before Magistrate Naumer and discharged accused him of being simply a vagrant. It was before he was arraigned on this charge that Duffy was photographed and measured by the police.

The affidavit of Policeman Hynes, who made the arrest is set forth at length.

"I have had examined the complaint book of this precinct," says the Mayor, "the blotter, and the court records, and no charge of burglary is contained in any official record made at this time in the store of Charrot & Henry."

An affidavit made by one Alphone Henry set forth that "a lady representing herself as Mrs. Duffy" came to the store and begged to have the case dropped, offering $7 for payment of the window which was broken.

Other policemen stated at the examination by the Mayor that they had received information from various sources that young Duffy frequently consorted with persons of bad repute. Hynes was asked by the Mayor if he had ever seen Duffy doing anything to lead him to believe that he was a bad boy previous to the arrest and he replied: "No, except his hours and my opinion of his associates."

The other arrests of Duffy and the evidence of the policemen who made them are set forth at length.

Evidence in the Duffy Case.

When Duffy was arrested the third time, according to the report, he was charged with assaulting and robbing George Seibel of 57 Ashland Place, Brooklyn. He was discharged by Magistrate Dooley, but, according to the police, that was because of false evidence given in court by a woman named Loretta Ryan, or Blumlein, who swore that at the time of the alleged assault she was with Seibel at the Brooklyn Hotel. The Mayor apparently had no more trouble in riddling the evidence in this case than he had in that of all the other arrests. Summing up this evidence the Mayor says:

> Many allegations were made in the different affidavits submitted by the officers above mentioned, which statements were reaffirmed in their examination before me, that Duffy was in the habit of associating with other boys who had been arrested or were generally known as bad boys. This statement, however, even if true, cannot justify the retention of the boy's picture in the Rogues' Gallery, as I am not aware that even the police authorities have ever contended that a man's photograph should be taken and retained in the gallery merely because of the men that he happens to associate with.

The Mayor's statement goes on to say that Police Commissioner Bingham asked that the Mayor receive two affidavits from women who, he said, admitted that they had committed perjury in the Seibel case in order that Duffy might be indicted by the Grand Jury. The Mayor says he turned this new evidence over to District Attorney Clarke of Kings County, who replied that it was not worth considering.

The Duffy Side of It.

The report then sets forth the evidence on Duffy's side. It was given by his friends and members of his family. These included the boy's mother and father, Father Flynn, Father McAteer, Mr. Slaughter, President of the milk company for which Duffy works; Mr. Elsner, foreman of the company; Principal Sherman of Public School 15, Teacher Walmsley of the same school, Mr. Schneider, a neighbor, and Walter J. Bryan of the Controller's office, another neighbor. All gave the boy an excellent character. The boy's mother testified flatly that she had never asked Mr. Charrot or Mr. Henry to withdraw the complaint of breaking the window, which the police had made against young Duffy.

"My acquaintance with young Duffy," says Father Flynn in his testimony, "dates from the year 1896. I had charge of him in Sunday school for some seven years, as well as a special class held twice a week during that time for religious instruction. During those years I found him to be always a truthful, honest, manly chap. I think that my relations with the lad were, after his good parents, the very closest. Never did I know him to drink intoxicating liquor or to be guilty of a dishonest or unmanly act. I feel most deeply for him in this affair, and I know that your Honor will see that strict justice will be done him."

Father McAteer said he had made inquiries about Duffy, and was told he went to confession regularly and to mass every Sunday. On certain Sundays, he said, Duffy acted as usher at the old church in Debevoise Street.

"The evidence by three high officials of the Catholic Church in favor of this boy, based on the means available to them for ascertaining the truth, would have convinced me in his favor without further testimony," says the Mayor.

Mr. Slaughter stated that he had had no trouble with Duffy over his accounts, and added: "He is capable and seems to be conscientious in his work." As to the boy's standing on his merits with his employer, Mr. Slaughter said:

"I never knew him until he came there; never saw his father until to-day. Up to to-day he has been honest, truthful, and industrious, so far as we are concerned."

"Have you found him industrious?" the Mayor asked of Foreman Elsner.

"Industrious!" replied the foreman. "He is building up his route just as we want it."

Mr. Schneider, who said he had known Duffy since the latter wore short dresses, testified:

"I never heard him use profane language; I never heard anything against his character until I read it in the papers. I was the most astonished person about it."

Commenting on the legal aspect of the right of the police to retain photographs in the Rogues' Gallery, the Mayor says he has examined the law on the subject thoroughly and cites the decisions of the Judges in half a dozen cases. They all went to show, however, that no one who applied to have his picture taken from the gallery was successful until, as the result of the Molineaux appeal, the Legislature passed the section known as 379 A, Chapter 626 of the Laws of 1907.

Justice Burr's Decision.

The Mayor quotes fully the decision of Justice Burr in the case of Gow vs. Bingham and ends up with this recommendation of his own:

> As to the arrest on the Holmer complaint the boy testified that he had been up in the country for some time, where his people go for the Summer. He said:
> "I had just come back and had been in the city two days when I was going to the Orpheum Theatre in the afternoon, when Officer Clarke came up to me and says: 'Ha, ha; you are back off the road'; and he slipped handcuffs on my wrist, and I said: 'Don't do anything like that'; and he says: 'Walk down to Headquarters; we want you for an affair in the 144th Precinct.'"
>
> The boy then asked him to wait until he could send word to his family. He claims the officer said: "If you wait a minute I will break your head with this club." The boy claims that he insisted on telling his family about being arrested, and the officer further said:
>
> "You will go along with me in the way I want you to go, or if you don't I will break your back."
>
> It is with great reluctance that I venture a suggestion that has perhaps not occurred to Mr. Justice Burr in writing his opinion, namely, the duty of the police to have the suspected offender in court when the question to be determined is whether the peace and dignity of the State of New York has been violated.
>
> Suppose, for example, a rule should be laid down that a man should only be photographed and measured after conviction. No photograph would then be taken until after a regular trial, and the prisoner had been found guilty.
> Suppose, however, the prisoner obtains his release from custody by giving bail, and thereafter absconds. Is it not the duty of the police of the City of New York who have arrested this man to apprehend him again as soon as possible in order that the criminal justice of the State may be administered?
> Can there be any question but that photographs and Bertillon measurements of such a person would be of the greatest assistance in securing the person of the fugitive, and in this case of some distant State having him detected and extradited and brought back to New York, there to answer the charge made against him? As I have said, it is with great hesitation that I present this personal view, as I feel that, as the Executive of this city, I should not encroach upon the duties of those elected to the judiciary.
> This non-interference of an executive officer with judicial powers also precludes me from making any new judicial rule of action on such facts as are here presented. The learned opinion of the Justice in the Gow case is [illegible] a defeat of [illegible] prisoner, to call to the attention of the people of this city, the language of the Court of Appeals in the Molineaux case, where Mr. Justice Vann, writing the opinion, concurred in by the entire bench, said:
>
> "An innocent man accused of crime is times compelled to make sacrifices and undergo suffering for the benefit of society. *  * One for the good of all may be required to submit to imprisonment, incur expense, and endure mental distress because the State cannot exist without the preservation of order, and order cannot be preserved without the punishment of the guilty, which necessarily involves, sometimes, the trial of the innocent."

Rumors Afloat All Day.

The statement in the guise of a personal letter from the Mayor to Commissioner Bingham reached Police Headquarters at 6 o'clock last night in the hands of Lieut. Kennell, attached to the Mayor's office. But all day long the rumor that First Deputy Commissioner Hanson and Secretary Slattery were to be ousted; that Inspector Russell was to be reduced, and that Inspector Kelly was to be elevated had been circulating through the gray stone building in Mulberry Street, and one official after another asked:

"What will Bingham do now?

At 3 o'clock in the afternoon every one at Headquarters and the newspaper offices opposite were in the incongruous position of knowing exactly what the Mayor's report contained and yet of being unable to discuss it for publication because the official printed copy of it had not yet arrived. Commissioner Bingham, who usually leaves his office shortly before 5 o'clock, waited until after 5:30 for the Mayor's decision. Then he left Secretary Slattery to receive it, slipped down into the inner courtyard, climbed into the rear seat of his touring car, and signaled to the chauffeur to start. Just as the machine darted out of the Mott Street rear entrance a reporter spied him. The Commissioner signaled to the chauffeur to stop.

"No," he said, "I have nothing to say about the Mayor's reported action. I haven't yet received his decision. I don't even know officially that it is in existence. There isn't any use of your trying to see me at my hotel, either. If there is anything to say I'll say it to you here to-morrow morning."

Unofficially Mulberry Street agreed that this trouble had been brewing for almost two years, and that the Duffy case had merely brought things to a climax.

Although Secretary Slattery refused to discuss the Mayor's action for publication, he intimated to his friends that in the event of his leaving the Secretaryship he would take a three-months' rest in the country with his family, and in the Autumn would return to newspaper work.

Proposed Interborough's New Routes

one at Canal Street, one at Forty-second Street, and the third at 149th Street, with a new entrance into Brooklyn over the Manhattan Bridge and a new entrance into Queens Borough through the Steinway tunnel.

"Upon the completion of this work a passenger will be enabled to travel from Flatbush Avenue in Brooklyn to Van Cortlandt Park on the west side, or to the Bronx Park by a through east side route for a single fare. He can go uptown or downtown on either side of Manhattan and cross to the other side at East 149th Street, at Forty-second Street, or at Canal Street. He can enter Manhattan through the Steinway tube and travel uptown or downtown on either side. He can reach the great terminals of the Pennsylvania and the New York Central from a convenient point of departure in Brooklyn, in Queens Borough, in the Bronx, east and west, and on either side of Manhattan Island uptown and downtown.

"The extensions and connections to the present Subway, by which all this will be accomplished, will be made with money that we shall supply, but the title will at all times vest in the city, and in a little more than the life of a generation the city will have it free and clear. Our plan will girdle Manhattan, reach into every adjoining borough, and every foot of tunnel and track is the city's own.

Sixty-eight Miles of New Tracks.

"Of the sixty-eight and one-half miles of new track facilities provided in our plan, forty-four miles will be laid in subway extensions and twenty-four and one-half miles on additions to and extensions of the elevated.

"When all of these changes have been accomplished the residents of the Bronx, on either side of the Grand Boulevard, and the residents of Manhattan, on either side of town, will have express train facilities from their homes to the City Hall and the Battery and a connection with the Second and Third Avenue elevated roads via the Queensboro Bridge to Long Island City for a single five-cent fare.

"These plans require the construction by us of two new bridges across the Harlem River, one on the site of the Second Avenue bridge and another on the site of Macomb's Dam bridge, which, of course, will be so accomplished as to occasion practically no interruption of traffic."

RECORDS OF THE OFFICIALS.

Facts About Hanson, Slattery, Kelly, Russell, and Holohan.

First Deputy Commissioner Hanson, whom the Mayor orders removed, joined Commissioner Bingham's staff about two years ago as Third Deputy Commissioner, taking the place of Deputy Mathot, who resigned. Like his predecessor Hanson was a lawyer. At the time of his appointment his offices were at 42 Broadway. He was graduated from Yale in 1890. There he was a member of the Varsity football team. He was graduated from the Cornell University Law School in 1895. He is a member of the Bar Association, the Yale and Cornell Clubs, the Municipal Art Society, and the Reform Club.

Secretary Slattery began life as an office boy on The New York Sun in 1886. After six or seven years he became a reporter. When he was appointed Gen. Bingham's secretary, three years ago, he had been covering the Tenderloin Police Station for The Sun for a number of years.

Commissioner Bingham said when he made the appointment that he was appointing Mr. Slattery because the latter was "level, ambitious, honest, and wise, and knew the police thoroughly through his newspaper work." Mr. Slattery was a friend of Water Commissioner Frank O'Brien, who was at that time Mayor McClellan's secretary.

In January, 1908, Police Sergeant Joseph A. Wasserman of the District Attorney's office, while on trial at Police Headquarters for extortion, accused Secretary Slattery of "hounding him" because he had refused to pay Mr. Slattery $1,000 for his promotion two years before. Mr. Slattery denied the charges, and both he and Commissioner Bingham asked the District Attorney to investigate. Wasserman's charges against Mr. Slattery were never substantiated. Mr. Slattery's salary as Secretary is $3,000.

Inspector Thomas J. Kelly, who, according to the Mayor's ninth order, is to be designated "Inspector at Large, with headquarters in the Mayor's office at City Hall," joined the force in 1896, and is a resident of Tammany Leader Charles F. Murphy's district. After being in the department only two years, he was made a Detective Sergeant. His specialty was "out-of-town pickpockets" and his partner was Detective Sergeant Cray, one of Leader Murphy's brothers-in-law.

Mayor McClellan appointed him as his bodyguard as soon as he took office, six years ago. Last year Kelly was made a Captain and became Inspector a few months ago. When Justice Gaynor stirred up the Duffy inquiry a few weeks back, Mayor McClellan appointed Kelly to investigate it. On Kelly's report, it was said last night, the Mayor's findings were in a measure based.

Inspector John Russell, whom Commissioner Bingham placed in charge of the Boroughs of Brooklyn and Queens, and the Mayor now orders reduced to a Bronx precinct Captaincy for having made "false statements" to the Mayor during recent police investigations, has an unusual reputation as an efficient precinct cleaner. He was appointed to the force in 1886, did clerical work at Central Office, was made a Captain by ex-Police Commissioner McAdoo, and began to make a mark as soon as he was put in charge of the West Thirty-seventh Street Station.

Inspector George P. Holohan, who lives at 409 Classon Avenue, Brooklyn, was appointed a patrolman on the New York Police Force on Jan. 7, 1893. He was appointed a Captain of the 149th Precinct several years ago. About a year ago he was made an Inspector. He has never been in charge of a precinct in Manhattan, his work always being confined to Brooklyn.

AS POLITICIANS VIEW IT.

Cry of "Deal" from Fusionists—Tammany Hopes to Lose Bingham.

Aside from the effect that the Mayor's unqualified approval of Justice Gaynor's action might have upon the latter's political prospects at a time when he is prominently mentioned as a candidate to succeed Mr. McClellan, it was evident last night from the manner in which the news was received by politicians, both Democratic and Republican, that the effect of the Mayor's action will be widely felt.

Inquiries at the home of Tammany Leader Charles F. Murphy up to a late hour brought forth the reply that he was not at home, and that nobody there was informed as to his whereabouts. A close friend of Mr. Murphy said, however, that he regarded it a foregone conclusion that Police Commissioner Bingham would resign, and that his resignation would greatly please Tammany Hall. He also expressed as his firm conviction that Gen. Bingham's successor would be a man much more friendly to the organization than the present Police Commissioner. There has been much friction between the present Commissioner and many Tammany leaders, notably the Sullivans.

Among the Republicans and independents who expect to enter into the prospective fusion arrangement with a view to defeating Tammany in the coming election the Mayor's action caused uneasiness chiefly because of the likelihood that it would compel the resignation of Police Commissioner Bingham, who they feel could be depended upon to see to it that the election laws were enforced next November.

In connection with this, it was learned last night that one of the most influential members of the Executive Committee of the Committee of One Hundred had written to Gen. Bingham within the last week asking him to remain in office in the interests of an honest election, regardless of how uncongenial the job might become after a decision had been reached in the Duffy case. What answer this member had received from Commissioner Bingham could not be learned.

Raymond V. Ingersoll, a Brooklyn lawyer, who, as Chairman of its Executive Committee, will direct the policy of the Committee of One Hundred, when he learned of the Mayor's decision last night said that some action might be taken in reference to it at the meeting of the Executive Committee scheduled for this afternoon. Mr. Ingersoll authorized this statement:

"That the Mayor should take charge of the Police Department—which is what this shake-up means—on the eve of a municipal campaign indicates lack of confidence in Police Commissioner Bingham. The only logical thing for the Mayor to do, therefore, is to remove the Commissioner.

There was one feature of the changes ordered by Mayor McClellan that did not altogether please the Tammany leaders. This was the direction issued by the Mayor with reference to the Brooklyn situation. It was said last night that these would give great pleasure and comfort to Leader Murphy's political foe, Senator Patrick H. McCarren.

First Deputy Commissioner Baker, who now is restored to the command of the Brooklyn forces, is admittedly friendly to Senator McCarren, and the same is true regarding Inspector Holohan, whom the Mayor directs should be made Borough Inspector under First Deputy Commissioner Baker.

Bingham Makes Morris a Captain.

The last vacancy on the eligible list of Captains was filled yesterday morning by Police Commissioner Bingham when he appointed Frank J. Morris, Acting Captain temporarily in charge of the Fifty-first Street Station, to the rank of Captain. Morris is 45 years old and lives at 406 West 171st Street.

A Piano's Value Depends on the Use You Can Make of It

THE best piano made, is of little value unless it is played. As well own a fine painting that you never see, as a fine piano the beautiful qualities of which you cannot enjoy.

The Pianola Piano

possesses musical qualities of the highest order that can be enjoyed to the uttermost by everyone. Where the best pianists heretofore exhausted but a fraction of what the piano offered, with the PIANOLA PIANO even a business man may now play practically every piece of music ever written.

And what gives point to this, and makes the PIANOLA PIANO the most valuable piano made, is the fact that everyone can play it with the taste and expression of a trained musician.

An Important Advantage of the PIANOLA

In considering Piano-players, remember that the PIANOLA whether used alone or in connection with a piano, is a trade-mark name. One of the most important features that distinguish the PIANOLA from all other instruments is a device which picks out the melody or theme and causes it to sound above all other notes. Without the Themodist no such instrument is complete and only the PIANOLA and PIANOLA PIANO have the Themodist.

EXACT and TIMELY COSTS

By the older method of cost accounting the approximate cost is obtained of a given amount of product. The actual profits of the factory are not known until the end of the year—and not then until an inventory can be taken and figured.

By the modern method of cost accounting the cost of each order going through the factory, of each process, is exactly known, the efficiency of each machine, of each man, of each method is analyzed and compared. The reason for every fluctuation in cost and result is shown at once. The profits of the factory can be known every month—or every day, if desired.

TAFT'S BUSY DAY AT YALE EXERCISES

Marches in Procession, Attends Meetings, and Finally Visits Skull and Bones.

YEAR'S GIFTS $1,000,000

Of Which but $150,000 Came from the General Educational Board, Hadley Announces.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., June 30.—Commencement Day at Yale University was especially attractive to the alumni because of the presence of President Taft. Mr. Taft, who belongs to the class of '78, donned the robes as a corporation member and walked in the procession, which is made up of the several hundred officers of the university and the candidates for degrees. The occasion was one of simplicity of arrangements so far as President Taft was concerned. In theory, at least, Mr. Taft laid aside his public duties in New Haven and became an alumnus.

But even as an alumnus the President was kept busy. He attended a meeting of the Yale Corporation, spoke at the mid-day dinner of the alumni, presided over a meeting held for the purpose of arranging for a memorial for Yale men who died on both sides in the civil war, stood for nearly two hours with President Hadley at the commencement reception, and rushed to-night from a meeting of Skull and Bones to board the private car which was attached to the midnight train for Washington. The President will reach the capital at 9:45 to-morrow morning.

The Skull and Bones is a secret society, founded by the President's father when he was a student at Yale. All the Tafts have belonged to it. Its proceedings are secret. The President passed into the shrine of Skull and Bones temple all alone to-night, not even Capt. Butt, his military aid, was allowed to pass the portals, and all of the Secret Service men had to keep watch outside.

Another feature of the commencement which shared interest with the President's visit was President Hadley's announcement that during the past year the university has received gifts amounting to $1,000,000. Of this sum $150,000 came from the General Educational Board, the allotment having been conditioned upon the receipt of $850,000 from other sources. One gift of $100,000 and three of $50,000 each were announced as anonymous.

The President arrived in this city at 3:05 this morning. His special car was side-tracked in the railroad yard so that he might sleep undisturbed until the hour of rising, which was 8 o'clock. Then he was driven to the home of President Hadley in Whitney Avenue, accompanied by Capt. A. W. Butt, his military aid, and Mr. Mischler, his assistant secretary. The President came quietly, and it was his desire that his visit be accepted as a matter of course without any change in the arrangements for the commencement exercises.

Last year President Taft came here as one of the chief guests of the university, for it was his reunion year, and Yale men were enthusiastic at the prospect that a Yale man might become President. To-day Yale greeted him no less cordially, but a certain formal dignity was added.

From President Hadley's office Mr. Taft and the President of the university walked to Woodbridge Hall to attend the final corporation meeting of the year. Most of the business of the commencement period was transacted by the corporation on Monday, so that to-day's sitting was a brief one.

The procession of officers, graduates, candidates for degrees, and invited guests was formed under the elms on the college campus. The mace was carried by Prof. Gustave Schwab, the marshal of the day. In the long line there were 299 candidates for degrees, as well as those who received honorary degrees.

President Taft walked in line with President Hadley, followed by Capt. Butt and Treasurer Lee McClung. Then came Secretary Anson Phelps Stokes and the fellows. Among the guests were Charles P. Taft and Henry W. Taft and Senator Chauncey M. Depew. There were also in line Secretary of War Dickinson, Rear Admiral Charles S. Sperry, Bishop William Lawrence, and Prof. William Graham Sumner.

The procession moved to Woolsey Hall for the exercises, which began about 11 o'clock. President Taft sat on the stage with the corporation members and the guests. The Dean of each department presented the candidates for degrees, and these were conferred by President Hadley. Then followed the presentation of the candidates for the honorary degrees, each being received with applause. There were given in all 814 degrees, exclusive of the honorary degrees. Honorary degrees were conferred as follows:

MASTER OF ARTS.

JOSEPH AUGUSTUS BLAKE, a graduate of Yale and Professor of Surgery at the College of Physicians and Surgeons.

JOHN MARSHALL HOLCOMBE, a Yale graduate and a business man of Hartford.

JOHN PIERPONT CODRINGTON FOSTER, a Yale graduate and a physician who has been prominent in the campaign against tuberculosis and a member of the Yale Medical School Faculty.

HENRY EDWARD KREHBIEL, musical critic of New York.

DOCTOR OF SCIENCE.

WILLIAM THOMPSON SEDGWICK, a graduate of the Sheffield Scientific School, formerly instructor at Yale and now Professor of Biology at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

ELIAKIM HASTINGS MOORE, graduate of Yale and at present head of the department of mathematics at the University of Chicago.

DOCTOR OF DIVINITY.

DOCTOR OF LAWS.

CHARLES STILLMAN SPERRY, graduate of the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis and Rear Admiral of the United States Navy.

JACOB McGAVOCK DICKINSON, Secretary of War.

WILLIAM GRAHAM SUMNER, Professor of Political Social Science at Yale, who retires this year.

In conferring the degree of Doctor of Laws upon Rear Admiral Sperry, President Hadley said:

"Like all true men who are trained to fight, he has been active in the support of measures to comfort the injured and to promote universal peace."

When he conferred a similar degree upon Secretary Dickinson, President Hadley said:

"Yale numbers among her students to-day, as in the past, a considerable proportion of men from the South. It is peculiarly fitting to-day, therefore, that we recognize not merely one of the highest officials in our country, but that we add to our honorary rolls a man who was born in Mississippi and educated in Tennessee. In the legal profession he has proved the wisdom of a sound and broad training, and like another man whose name we know he left the practice of the legal profession to became Secretary of War. In this position he is reflecting credit on his early training, on his native State, and on his Yale predecessor in the same office who heard the voice of the people say, 'Friend, go up higher.'"

President Hadley announced the prize winners in the competitions which are considered to be the most important in the university. Some of these were:

THE PHILO SHERMAN BENNETT PRIZE—For the best essay discussing the "Principles of Free Government," to George Edward Copenhaver of Bristol, Tenn., a graduate of Roanoke College, and a member of the graduate school at Yale. The subject assigned for this year was "The Constitution of Oklahoma."

THE CHARLES WASHBURN CLARK PRIZE—For the best essay by a member of the senior or junior class in the college on "The Comparison of the Diplomatic and Consular Service of the United States with That of the Countries of Europe," to John Gooden Poore of Willow Grove, Del., a member of the junior class.

THE COBDEN CLUB MEDAL—For excellence in political economy, to Paul Howard McGregor Converse of Rochester, a member of the academic graduating class.

President Hadley announced the conferring of a degree upon President Lowell of Harvard, saying that the newly chosen head of a sister university was a great scholar, a great man, and one with whom the American universities could work in the cause of higher education.

In the early afternoon President Taft went to Memorial Hall, where the annual dinner of the alumni was held.

Announcement was made to-day that the Yale University Treasurer had received another installment of $25,000 from the Blount bequest in England, leaving only about $5,000 to be paid for the final settlement. The Treasurer also has received from the estate of Dr. W. W. Peirce $6,000, and from the estate of Arthur Stedman, son of the late Edmund C. Stedman of New York, $2,000.

On the long list of gifts to the university announced to-day was one of $100,000 to constitute the John Sloane memorial fund for salary increases and general university purposes. The gift was from members of the late Mr. Sloane's immediate family. An addition of $12,500 is also announced to the fund established by Eugene Meyer, Jr., of New York, to be used for the promotion of debate and interest in public questions; $25,000 has been received from William C. Wilcox of New York for the establishment of the David Wilcox university loan fund.

Anonymous gifts from three graduates, subject to annuities totaling $150,000, are also on the list. Two of these are for professorships. A gift of $10,000 has been made by New Haven citizens to create a Sunday opening fund, to enable the university to open the galleries of the School of Fine Arts and the exhibition rooms of the Peabody Museum Sunday afternoons during the Winter.

A subscription of $20,000 has been made by J. Newton Barney of Farmington, Conn., toward the establishment of a professorship of education at the university. An anonymous gift of $20,000 from a citizen of the State for the same object has been made. However, it is conditional upon the raising of a fund of $100,000 within a year.

WHITRIDGE GETS A DEGREE.

Amherst Makes Columbia Lecturer a Doctor of Laws.

AMHERST, Mass., June 30.—Amherst College's eighty-eighth commencement was observed to-day. The graduates this year numbered about 100. Most of them received the degree of Bachelor of Arts, while a few were made Bachelors of Science.

The commencement orations were delivered in College Hall, after which President George Harris conferred the degrees in course and then the honorary degrees. Among the recipients of honorary degrees were Frederic Wallingford Whitridge of New York, a lawyer and lecturer at Columbia, and Harry Augustus Garfield, President of Williams College, who were made Doctors of Laws.

A feature of the exercises was the presentation to the college by Dr. William Hayes Ward of a portrait of John E. Sanford of the class of '51, who for thirty years was a Trustee of the college.

191 IN DARTMOUTH'S CLASS.

Horace Fletcher Receives Honorary Degree of Master of Arts.

HANOVER, N. H., June 30.—A class of 191 received diplomas at Dartmouth's commencement to-day. Following a prayer service in Rollins Chapel, the senior class, Faculty, and alumni, wearing academic gowns and in procession headed by the oldest living alumnus, Joseph M. Rockwood of the Class of 1839, marched twice around the campus, finally entering Webster Hall, where the day's exercises took place.

In the absence of President Tucker, who retires next month, Prof. John K. Lord presided as Acting President. Arthur L. Graves of Wells River, Vt. was the class salutatorian, and Harold W. Cartland of Dover, N. H., its valedictorian. Prof. Ernest Nichols of Columbia University, President-elect of Dartmouth, was not present. The degrees in course were conferred by Prof. Charles Franklin Emerson, Dean of the college. One hundred and three received the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and eighty-eight received the degree of Bachelor of Science.

Gov. Henry B. Quinby of New Hampshire, and Horace Fletcher, the originator of "Fletcherism," received honorary degrees of Master of Arts.

HARVARD GIVES ELIOT TWO HONOR DEGREES

ALSO DOCTOR OF LAWS

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 30.—Thousands of alumni gathered at Harvard to-day for the commencement exercises. Harvard's first President Emeritus, Dr. Charles W. Eliot, was especially honored both by the university and the alumni and the student body. The university conferred upon him two degrees. He was made both a Doctor of Medicine and a Doctor of Laws.

The green lawns of the elm-shaded yard were thronged with graduates, students, teachers, and parents and friends of the graduating class. The weather was all that could be desired.

The candidates for degrees in course numbered 850. At 10 o'clock the President and Fellows, Overseers, Faculties, and other officers of the university, the candidates for honorary and course degrees, and the large number of distinguished guests formed in procession in the college yard before Massachusetts Hall, and, headed by the Chief Marshal and a band, marched to Sanders Theatre, where the exercises were held.

Immediately behind the band came the speakers of the day and the candidates for degrees, President A. Lawrence Lowell, Dr. Eliot, officers and Faculties of the university, and Gov. Eben S. Draper and his staff. The invited guests included many distinguished public officials, military and naval officers, and heads of many educational institutions. The rear of the parade was made up of alumni of more than twenty-five years' standing in the order of their classes.

The commencement orations were delivered by the members of the graduating class chosen for this purpose. Fletcher N. Robinson of Southern Pines, N. C., gave the Latin oration; Godfrey Dewey of Lake Placid, N. Y., treated of "Old English Spelling"; Hans Von Kaltenborn of Madison, Wis., spoke on "The College and the Press"; Sidney Fiske Kimball of Dorchester on "Team Play in College Studies," and Palfrey Perkins of Salem on "The Worship of the Understanding Heart."

The conferring of the degrees followed. Those who received honorary degrees were:

MASTER OF ARTS.

THOMAS FRANKLIN WATERS, antiquarian and investigator, Ipswich, Mass.

DOCTOR OF SCIENCE.

SAMUEL FRANKLIN EMMONS, geologist, Harvard graduate, and for many years a member of the United States Geological Survey.

DOCTOR OF DIVINITY.

DOCTOR OF LITERATURE.

HONORARY DOCTOR OF MEDICINE.

Charles William Eliot, former President of Harvard.

DOCTOR OF LAWS.

CHARLES WILLIAM ELIOT.

In conferring upon Dr. Eliot the degree of Doctor of Medicine President Lowell said:

"It has not been our custom to confer the degree of Doctor of Medicine, honoris causa, but an exception is fitting in the case of one who—in the opinion of professors of medicine—has accomplished more for the progress of medical education in this country than any other living man, Charles William Eliot. Not in its buildings alone, but also in the instruction and research within its walls, he found our medical school brick and left it marble."

When he conferred upon Dr. Eliot the degree of Doctor of Laws President Lowell spoke of his predecessor as:

"Teacher, administrator, orator, prophet, forty years the leader and guide of Harvard, and in the single-minded elevation of his character a model to her sons; the father of the present American university, the brother of all teachers, and the friend of every lover of his country."

At the alumni dinner this afternoon, President Emeritus Eliot presided and introduced President Lowell. The other speakers included Gov. Draper, Dr. Grenfell, ex-Mayor Mathews of Boston, Dr. Kuhnemann, and the Rev. Dr. George A. Gordon of Boston.

President Lowell said in his speech:

"You have laid on me the greatest task of any college President in the land. I accept the task and will do my utmost to carry it out. I know I have the support of the Faculty, and I hope I have the support of the alumni. We want to turn out men developed in body, mind, and soul, but we also want men who have developed the social side."

He announced that during the last year the university had received $672,000, including $248,000 for immediate use, in addition to the first installment of the McKay fund, amounting to $1,000,000. Applications for entrance, he said, promise the largest freshman class next Fall of recent years.

Harriman to Build $1,000,000 Tunnel.

PORTLAND, Ore., June 30.—A contract was let yesterday by the Harriman interests in this city for the boring of a tunnel through the peninsula between the Willamette and Columbia Rivers at a point just north of here. The tunnel will be 5,425 feet long and will cost about $1,000,000. The work must be completed within a year.

Second Calhoun Indictment Stands.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 30.—Judge Lawlor to-day overruled a motion to set aside the second indictment against Patrick Calhoun, President of the United Railroads, whose trial on a charge of offering a bribe to a supervisor resulted in a disagreement.

Attorneys for Calhoun then made a motion for a change of venue. The hearing on this motion was set for July 8.

ISLANDERS CAN'T SELL BOAT.

Commissioners Have Leased New Shoreham to New Haven.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 30.—According to a contract signed to-day by President Charles S. Mellen of the New Haven road and the Steamboat Commissioners of the town of New Shoreham the town's steamer New Shoreham will be navigated by the New England Navigation Company, a subsidiary company of the New Haven. By this lease, which is for four years, the steamer will run not only from this city to Block Island, but will continue from the island to Stonington, then returning stop at Block Island on way back to Providence.

Three years ago the town meeting, the town being heavily in debt, voted to sell the steamer. The Commissioners announced that this would be impossible because she had been leased to the New Haven Road. That lease expired to-day, but when the islanders, at their town meeting in April, again voted to sell the craft on the expiration of the contract, up bobbed the Commissioners with a statement that a new lease had been made to the Long Island Railroad, and that the boat was to run from the island to Montauk Point.

There appears to have been no such lease, but the announcement put off the sale. Since then the Commissioners have fixed up the contract, which was to-day signed with the New Hoven.

ARGUE FOR TOBACCO COUPONS

Representatives of American Tobacco Co. Before Senate Sub-Committee.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—Protesting vigorously against the effort to prevent the use of the coupon system of stimulating trade, representatives of the American Tobacco Company were heard to-day by a sub-committee of the Senate Committee on Finance in opposition to the Beveridge amendments to the Tariff bill. These amendments provide for the restoration of the sizes of packages of smoking tobacco as they existed before the imposition of a war tax, and for the prohibition of the use of premium coupons.

No particular objection was raised against the amendment affecting the size of packages. President Campbell of the Association of Independent Manufacturers of tobacco and snuff, who is expected to favor the measures, will be heard to-morrow.

The members of the sub-committee, consisting of Senators Lodge, Smoot, Flint, Daniel, and Simmons, were aided in their investigation of the subject by John T. Bivins, chief of the Division of Internal Revenue of the Treasury Department.

GOVERNMENT BONDS LAST.

Securities for $25,000,000 Call from Banks to be Withdrawn in Order.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—In connection with the call on National banks issued yesterday for the return of $25,000,000 public funds, the Secretary of the Treasury to-day notified depositary banks that the bonds held by the Treasury as security for the deposits called for must be withdrawn in the following order. First group, State, city, and railroads; second, Philippine Railway Company; third, Philippine loans, Porto Rican loans, District of Columbia, and Territory of Hawaii. The fourth class includes all Government bonds and the Panamas of 1936 and 1938.

Bonds within a group may be interchanged by banks if desired, but bonds in a lower group may not be substituted for those in a higher group. The amount of State, city, and railroad bonds in the Treasury to secure public deposits is $20,909,571.

LANDS ON BEAR'S BACK.

Bear as Much Scared as Parks, Who Fell from Window.

Special to The New York Times.

PORT JERVIS, June 30.—E. L. Parks, a publisher of Twenty-fifth Street and Fourth Avenue, New York City, is occupying a bungalow on top of the World Mountain, the highest in Pike County, Penn. Last night he was awakened by a noise in the rear of the building, and from the window he saw a large bear.

Mr. Parks leaned out of the window with a .22 calibre revolver, lost his balance, and fell upon the bear. His revolver went off and it was a question which was the more frightened, bear or man.

The bear uttered a roar of fright and ran toward the woods. H. Herman, son of ex-Sheriff Herman of Orange County, and a fellow-camper of Parks, was awakened by the noise and ran out with a shotgun. The bear could be seen lumbering away toward the woods, and, though Herman fired a shot after it, he failed to make a hit.

Mr. Parks was uninjured. So was the bear.

RUSSIA MAY OCCUPY CAPITAL OF PERSIA

SHAH CANNOT HOLD CITY

Forces Continue Active in Northwestern Persia—One Proclaims Himself Governor of Town.

ST. PETERSBURG, June 30.—The occupation of Teheran, the capital of Persia, by a Russian military expedition is regarded in well-informed circles as a distinct possibility of the near future. The latest advices from Teheran are highly unsatisfactory. They indicate that the British and Russian Consuls sent out to negotiate with the leader of the Bakhtiari forces advancing against Teheran from the south failed to obtain the desired promise that the march would be stayed, and the Bakhtiaris, who are acting in complete accord with the Caucasian and Persian revolutionists, are expected shortly to resume the offensive from Kasbin.

The Russian Foreign Office considers that the entrance of the Bakhtiaris into Teheran would not only involve street fighting and pillage on a grand scale, but would also threaten the lives of the members of the diplomatic corps and the foreign residents of Teheran. If necessity arises the Russian Government will undertake all measures that may be required for the protection of Russian lives and interests. The crisis is expected to come to a head within a fortnight.

If the occupation of Teheran is determined upon the troops will not be sent from Tabriz, but from the Caucasus. They will go by steamer from Baku to Enzeli, on the Caspian, and thence follow the road into Teheran, a distance of 230 miles. From Baku to Enzeli will take two days, and from there to the capital cavalry will require seven and infantry ten days additional.

The only force upon which the Persian Government can depend for the defense of Teheran consists of about 1,200 Persian Cossacks. This brigade might stand off the Bakhtiaris alone, in spite of the fact that the tribesmen are provided with artillery, but if the city was attacked in the rear by another force successful defense would be impossible.

The Foreign Office has a very poor opinion of the motives of the so-called liberal forces of Persia. Many of the leaders are actuated more by a desire for loot than for liberty. Sardarasad, the leader of the Bakhtiaris, is reputed to have designs on the throne, and his followers include men of the most savage and disorderly type.

While the situation at Teheran is threatening and critical, the Turks continue their activity to the northwest. They have introduced Turkish troops into Urumiah. The Turkish Consul at Dilman, fifty miles northwest of Urumiah, after bringing about the defeat and expulsion of the Nationalist forces at Dilman by Turkish troops, proclaimed himself Governor of the town.

BOMB KILLS WOMAN SPY.

Sent In Basket of Cherries to Widow of Traitor to Revolutionists.

TIFLIS, June 30.—Marie Bakhtadze, who had been prominent as an agent of the political police of Tiflis, was killed yesterday by a bomb sent to her by an unknown person in a basket of cherries.

Mme. Bakhtadze was the widow of a man who formerly was prominent among the revolutionists. He turned traitor, betrayed many of the revolutionary leaders, and entered the police service. He was killed last Autumn.

Out of revenge his widow became a spy and devoted herself to hunting down those responsible for her husband's death. For several weeks she had not ventured outside the police station.

RESPITE FOR SUFFRAGETTES.

They Come to Court Prepared for Jail, but Hearing Is Adjourned.

LONDON, June 30.—The 116 Suffragettes arrested last night during a raid on the House of Commons in an effort to present a petition to Premier Asquith were arraigned in the Bow Street Police Court this morning, and after lengthy arguments for and against the question of their right to present a petition to the Premier, which was raised by Mrs. Pankhurst, the magistrate adjourned all the cases until July 9, and the women were released on their own recognizance.

For an hour or more before the opening of the hearing the court building was surrounded by a dense crowd. Purple, white, and green, the colors of the Suffragettes, were largely in evidence, and the leaders of the movement, including Miss Christabel Pankhurst and Mrs. Pethick Lawrence were early in attendance.

A majority of the prisoners, who had been bailed out, arrived at court armed with valises of all kinds in preparation for their expected incarceration in Holloway Jail. The waiting room adjoining the court was crowded with women friends of the prisoners who, when tired of standing, sat down unceremoniously on the floor at the expense of their silk and satin skirts. Many of these women had brought with them bottles of tea and packages of sandwiches, and the waiting room looked like a picnic.

Superintendent Wells and Inspector Jarvis, the chief officers of the defensive forces last night, were in court with a large number of police witnesses. Sir Albert de Rutzen, Chief Magistrate of the Metiopolitan Police Courts, heard the charges, which were threefold, namely, obstructing the police, assaulting the police, and willful damage. The court room was crowded with the witnesses, including 100 policemen and officials, and there was little room left for spectators.

KAISER ON BRITISH SCARE.

Says Ground Can Be Regained by Productive Activity, Not War.

PARIS, June 30.—The Figaro publishes an account of a conversation between Emperor William and Baron d'Estournelles de Constant, President of the French Parliamentary Arbitration group, held recently at Kiel. In this talk the Emperor insisted that his policy was one of peace, and said that the battles of the future would be in the economic, industrial, and commercial field.

Great Britain was now traversing a period of acute nervousness, but he predicted that this would disappear when the country realized it could regain its lost economic ground, not by a destructive war, but by an increase in its productive activity.

He showed great interest in the French experiments in aviation, but said he believed that for the present dirigible balloons had incontestable advantages over aeroplanes.

ASKS $300,000 PROFIT IN A SALE TO CITY

COURT MAKES HIM TELL IT

Refused When Appraisal Board Asked Him—Corporation Counsel Wanted Him Punished for Contempt.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Francis J. Byrne applied to Supreme Court Justice Blanchard yesterday to punish Samuel Green, a well-known real estate dealer of 45 West Thirty-fourth Street, for contempt of court for refusing to answer a question put to him by the Commissioners of Appraisal in condemnation proceedings brought by the city as to the price paid by him for certain property about four months before the city took possession of it. After hearing argument the court directed Mr. Green to answer the question.

The property is the small vacant lot which forms the apex of a triangular block at the intersection of Centre and Lafayette Streets. The whole block is the property of Mr. Green, and covers 2,958 square feet. The part which the city has taken is the apex of the triangle, and is fronted by Duane and Reade Streets. It covers 1,361 square feet, and is to be used for an underground station connecting the present Subway with the Centre Street loop subway..

Mr. Green wants $390,000 for the property, or about $300 a square foot. The price he paid for it about four months before the city took possession did not transpire yesterday, but it was learned from reliable real estate sources that it was from $65,000 to $70,000, which at the price he is asking for it from the city would give him a profit of over $300,000.

Some time ago the Supreme Court appointed ex-Senator Nathaniel A. Elsberg, Gilbert H. Montague, and Sumner Gerard, as Commissioners of Appraisal to fix the value of the property.

Senator Elsberg, as Chairman of the commission, directed Mr. Green to state the price paid by him for the property, which was recorded six weeks previously. Mr. Green refused to answer, hence the present proceedings.

It was shown that the plot in Chambers Street, facing the Court House, and running through to Reade Street, was bought for $64 a square foot, as against the $300 a square foot asked by Mr. Green when the city is the purchaser.

POLICEMAN IN THE TOMBS.

Thomas Kelly Held by the Coroner Following a Bronx Lunchman's Death.

Policeman Thomas Kelly of the Morrisania Station was locked up in the Tombs yesterday by order of Coroner Acritelli on a charge of being concerned in the death of Sabato Basso, a lunchman in a saloon in Forest Avenue, the Bronx, who died at his home, 523 East 117th Street, on Monday night after telling his wife that he had been assaulted.

William Stellwagen, proprietor of the German Turn Verein Garden at 790 Forest Avenue; John Walter Dewald, a bartender there, and John A. Hayn, an athletic instructor, were held in $5,000 bail each on similar charges.

Rocco Savino, proprietor of a fruit stand outside the garden, made an affidavit that he saw Basso beaten until he could not stand by the policeman and the three men now held in bail. All the prisoners were arraigned before the Coroner yesterday and all declined to discuss the case by advice of counsel. Stellwagen alone got bail.

Coroner Acritelli said that he would hold an inquest shortly.

HELICOPTER LIFTS OPERATOR.

Successful Experiments with Horizontal Screw Flying Machine.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—For the first time in America a helicopter, a heavier-than-air type of flying machine, which depends on screws operating in the horizontal plane for its lifting power, has successfully lifted itself with an operator. A machine built by J. Newton Williams of Derby, Conn., and Emile Berliner of this city lifted Mr. Williams from the ground on three occasions. The experiment was made a day or two ago in Mr. Berliner's laboratory at Brightwood, a suburb of this city. The only other similar machine which is known to have lifted its aviator is that of H. Cornu, a French inventor.

Scientists have always had great respect for the helicopter type of flying machine. The Williams helicopter, with the operator, weighs about 600 pounds, and has a lifting surface of only 80 square feet. This surface consists of two pairs of propellers revolving horizontally in opposite directions at the end of a vertical shaft. The propellers are eight feet eight inches in diameter. In the successful experiments the machine was so confined that it could not rise more than ten inches, and it rose to that height.

In previous experiments the Williams machine has risen without an operator, and it has moved rapidly along a track in tests to determine its ability to move forward. The forward motion is obtained by the operator's shifting his position forward. Two motors of 36 horse-power each are used, but it is intended to use only one motor, from which it is expected greater power will be derived. It is also expected to reduce the weight of the complete machine without the operator to 325 pounds. It now weighs 450 pounds. Mr. Berliner has left for Europe, but the work of preparing the new motor will proceed.

CUBAN BUDGET FAILS; CONGRESS ADJOURNS

President Gomez Expected to Declare Last Year's Budget in Force.

STATE OF THE LAW IN DOUBT

Senate Amended Bill and Adjourned, Not Knowing House Adjourned First —Cockfighting Bill Passed.

HAVANA, June 30.—Congress adjourned this evening without final action on the budget. The Constitution requires that it be adopted before July 1, and President Gomez called a special session of the Senate, hoping it could be held before midnight, eliminate its own amendments, and adopt the budget as it passed the House. It was found impossible, however, to secure a quorum to-night. A few Senators met in a committee room but dispersed after a short time.

It was reported at the palace, after the special session had failed, that President Gomez would immediately issue a decree declaring operative the budget of 1908-09, in accordance with a provision in the executive law, which, however, conflicts with an article of the Constitution, declaring that the budget is applicable only in the year for which is was designed.

The House approved the budget in its entirety yesterday, and it was expected that the Senate would approve it to-day. The Senate, however, after devoting much time to a bill legalizing cockfighting, which was passed, made sundry minor modifications in the budget, sending it again to the House, in the apparent expectation that the modifications would be accepted. The House, in the meantime, had adjourned, but this was not known to the Senators until the Senate also had adjourned.

SOCIETY WOMAN FIGHTS FIRE.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., June 30.—Mrs. Thomas D. Peck, a society woman of Pittsfield, saved her villa and stables from burning yesterday afternoon by making a fight against the flames with a garden hose while awaiting the arrival of the Fire Department. When she discovered the blaze from excelsior she made a coupling of the garden hose, in the meantime sending the children for aid.

HAFFEN WASTEFUL, THEY SAY.

Commissioners of Accounts Assert That His Highways Bureau Is Extravagant.

In connection with the request of Borough President Haffen of the Bronx for $224,000 for street repairs and improvements the Commissioners of Accounts have issued a statement on the Bronx Bureau of Highways in which they characterize its methods as wasteful and extravagant.

The report is presented to the Board of Estimate at the request of the Mayor. The Aldermen have already approved Mr. Haffen's request for the $224,000, which was cut out of the last budget by the Board of Estimate. The matter came up at the last meeting of the board, when Mr. Haffen presented a list of the streets in his borough which he insists are in immediate need of attention. The Mayor then ordered that the Commissioners of Accounts' findings with respect to Mr. Haffen's Bureau of Highways in the recent investigation of his administration be inserted in the record.

The report states that 92 of the 106 streets in the Bronx mentioned by Mr. Haffen as in need of repair have been investigated, with the following result: Seven were found to be in excellent condition, 55 good, 17 fair, 11 poor, and 2 bad. The appropriation of the $224,000 is characterized as "profligate waste."

This astonishing and unparalleled record for speed and regularity of schedule has just been established by 123 days' operation, from Feb. 17 to June 20 (when this adv. was prepared), by the world-famous

20th Century Limited

Overnight to Chicago

Operating Record for 123 Consecutive Days

The train made 123 trips, Chicago to New York, aggregating 120,000 miles. It carried an average of nine cars each day, as high as eleven cars in single train and ran in double sections eight different days.

The weight of this train is approximately 1,800,000 lbs., this tremendous weight being drawn by a single engine weighing 266,000 lbs., conceded to be the most efficient and powerful type of passenger locomotive in the world.

The train was operated 2,214 hours, 132,840 minutes, and was late a total of but ten minutes—99 99/100% of a perfect record for 123 days' operation.

"SUI GENERIS"

There is a Latin expression, "sui generis," which, freely translated, means "the only one of its kind"—something which has made, and is the occupant of, a class by itself.

No other train in the world has ever made such a record for speed and regularity.

No other similar train in the world has ever carried so many passengers.

No other similar train in the world ever carried so many cars.

No other similar train in the world has ever been run in so many double sections, and in addition these double sections have pulled into the Grand Central Station side by side along the same platform, both sections exactly on time.

No other train in the world ever carried two dining cars daily to accommodate its patrons with meals without delay.

The Route Followed by this Train

The terminals at Chicago and New York are the most accessible in either city. The La Salle Street Station in Chicago is the only station on the elevated loop; Grand Central Station the only railroad terminal in New York City.

The "Controlled Manual Block System" used for the operation of this and other trains on New York Central Lines is said by the Interstate Commerce Commission to be the "safest known," and that on account of its "superiority" it "cannot be compared with others on a satisfactory basis."

SIGEL WITNESSES IDENTIFY SING

Expressmen Pick Him Out of Ten Men as Chinaman Who Was in Room with the Trunk.

LING'S LETTER INTERCEPTED

Appeal to Chinese Society Said One Man Killed Elsie—Police Say Chinese Are Not Helping Hunt Ling.

Chong Sing, roommate of Leon Ling, in whose room in the chop suey house at 24 Eighth Avenue Elsie Sigel was slain on June 9, was accused yesterday by two witnesses of being in the scheme to get rid of the girl's body after it was bundled into Ling's trunk.

The witnesses, Arthur Logan and James Wilson, the expressmen who carted the trunk to the Harlem laundry of Man Lee, a Chinaman with half a dozen alibis, positively identified Sing at the Tombs of Detention as having been in Ling's room when they called for the trunk.

The expressmen declared that when they went to Ling's room Sing stepped forth from the darkness and pointed out the trunk. They could make out the form of another Chinaman, more slender than Sing, in another part of the small room. He remained silent while the expressmen were there. This man, the police are sure, was Leon Ling, who, half an hour before the arrival of the expressmen, had gone to the office of their employer, at Eighth Avenue and Forty-fifth Street, and engaged the wagon to carry the trunk to Man Lee's laundry.

This identification completely punctured the story told the police by Chong Sing that he had nothing to do with sending the trunk away and that he was not in the room when it left the house.

The police will now put Sing through another process of "third degree" and try to wring the truth from him. It was learned at Police Headquarters last night that Sing has become hopelessly enmeshed in the lies and that he will have all he can do to clear himself of participation in the crime.

Chong Sing wrot a letter yesterday morning to an acquaintance in Chinatown, a member of the Four Brothers' Society, with which he is affiliated, declaring that the police were trying to fix complicity in the murder upon him, and that he was innocent. He asked that the Four Brothers' Society, which is a Chinese secret organization, come to his aid and put the blame upon the man who committed it. "It was done by one man," wrote Sing.

The letter was intercepted by the District Attorney's office.

Capt. Arthur Carey of the Detective Bureau tried yesterday to get some clue to the identity of the four Chinamen in Chinatown who sat in the room next to that of Leon Ling's and watched while the trunk was being taken out. He had a dozen detectives in Chinatown on this line of investigation, but if they obtained any information the Captain would not make it.

It is still the police theory that Leon Ling murdered Elsie Sigel because of a feud of Chu Gain, the Mott Street restaurant keeper.

Capt. Carey is looking for Man Lee, Ging Ying Dat, alias Arthur Yung, alias Yung Art, and other aliases, who removed the trunk at the 126th Street laundry. Man Lee disappeared after the police discovered Elsie Sigel's body and left no clue.

A suggestion that Leon Ling tried to bury Elsie Sigel's body in the cellar beneath Man Lee's laundry is not credited by the police, and men working in the cellar said it showed no evidence of having been disturbed.

A flurry was caused at Police Headquarters late yesterday when a young Chinese woman, accompanied by a Chinaman, was taken to Capt. Carey's office. They were questioned for twenty minutes, and it was reported that their visit had to do with the Sigel murder case. Capt. Carey would not talk about the visit.

Assistant District Attorney Jerome wrote yesterday to Prof. John Endicott Gardner of the Department of Oriental Languages, University of the Pacific, in San Francisco, asking him to come here and assist in the investigation of the Sigel murder. He wants some letters and papers written in Chinese, which have been gathered by the police, translated. Besides this, Prof. Gardner could be used to interpret stories told by Chong Sing and other Chinamen who figure in the case. The police are not satisfied that Chong Sing has been correctly quoted by the Chinese interpreter they have used.

An official in charge of the police investigation declared yesterday that the impression sent out by certain Chinese societies in Chinatown that they were aiding in the effort to find Leon Ling was false. Not one of the societies, he said, wanted Leon Ling caught.

NEW ORLEANS, June 30.—Lieut. Col. Alexander Pasos of the Nicaraguan army, who was mistook for Leon Ling, the alleged slayer of Elsie Sigel, and arrested here yesterday, declared last night that he would report the matter to the Nicaraguan Minister in Washington. Col. Pasos arrived here yesterday from Washington, where he states he has been the guest of the Nicaraguan Minister.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—A prompt expression of regret probably will be made by the New Orleans authorities if Col. Pasos, who was mistaken for Leon Ling, should make his arrest an international issue and bring it before the State Department. Such an expression would be transmitted by the department to the Nicaraguan Minister to be sent in turn to Col. Pasos. The latter was recently in a Philadelphia nospital for the treatment of a severe wound received in battle during a revolutionary outbreak in Nicaragua. The Nicaraguan Minister has not heard from Col. Passos.

HONOLULU, June 30.—On the arrival of the Pacific Mail steamship Manchuria to-day the police searched the vessel in the hope of capturing Leon Ling, but without result. The Manchuria is still closely watched on the theory that Ling may be stowed away. When the vessel left San Francisco the police there made a systematic search for the fugitive on account of a report that he was in California and would attempt to reach China from some port on the Pacific coast.

Will Be Represented at the San Francisco Rebuilding Festival.

PARIS, June 30.—Charles C. Wellman Leaves Tromsoe.

TROMSOE, Norway, June 30.—Walter Wellman and the other members of the expedition that is planning to reach the north pole this Summer by airship left here this morning on the steamer Arctic with a large quantity of material for the rebuilding of the balloon shed at Spitzbergen which was destroyed last Winter in a storm.

ADMIT COLLUSIVE BIDDING.

Four Bridge Concerns Plead Guilty and Are Fined in Boston.

BOSTON, June 30.—The long drawn out series of cases resulting in the discovery by the Finance Commission of the "Boston Agreement" in connection with bids for steel contract work reached still another stage to-day, when four firms pleaded guilty, through counsel, to collusive bidding and were fined by Judge Sanderson in the Superior Criminal Court. The Boston Bridge Works and the Groton Bridge Company were each fined $1,500 and the Canton Bridge Company $2,000 for agreed bidding in the contracts for the Brookline street bridge and for the Atlantic Avenue draw span. The Oswego Bridge Company, concerned only in the Brookline street bridge case, was fined $1,000.

This disposition of the cases was recommended by District Attorney Hill, and similar action is likely in the remainder of the cases, individual and corporate, which are as yet undisposed of. Altogether nearly a score of firms and about thirty-five individuals were indicted in connection with the "Boston Agreement."

STATE HAS BIG OIL PROFITS.

Special to The New York Times.

DALLAS, June 30.—Robert J. Eckert, State Receiver for the Waters-Pierce Oil Company, made public to-day his official monthly report covering operations from April 22, the date on which he took charge, to May 31. The assets of the company in Texas are shown to be worth $1,832,143.37. The net profits of the business, as shown by the cash balance for the five weeks the State receiver has been in charge, approximate $70,000. This average would make for the year net profits of $728,000.

The public has known all along that large profits were made by the Waters-Pierce Company and since the State took charge the expectation has been that the price of oil would be lower, but on the contrary it has been made higher. The Texas company recently increased its price for oil 2 cents a gallon. The state receiver is charging the same price for the Waters-Pierce product. This has caused much criticism of the State's course.

MUSIC FOR HIS COWS.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTCLAIR, N. J., June 30.—Asserting that the psychic qualities of phonograph music have the effect of persuading his cows to give more milk than they are inclined to give without the aid of soul-stirring harmonies, Steever Smith, a farmer near Great Notch, came here to-day and purchased a dozen new records at a music store for use in his dairy.

Smith said he formerly had in his employ as dairymaid a Swiss girl, whose yodling to the cows had such a soothing effect that the bovines would have made him rich through their efforts if the pleasant conditions could have continued for a few years. The girl, Lena by name, got married, and after her departure the cows moped and refused to give much milk.

The accidental introduction of the phonograph at the farmhouse gave Smith a hint as to its advantages as a substitute for the songs of the tuneful dairymaid, and now the cows are in a fair way to become heavy milk producers as of yore.

WOMEN UP IN A BALLOON.

Mrs. and Miss Harrison of This City Passengers in the Massachusetts.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., June 30.—About two hours before sunrise to-day an ascension was made from here in the new balloon Massachusetts, A. Holland Forbes of New York piloting the aircraft, with C. B. Harmon, Mrs. O. B. Harrison, and Miss C. Harrison of New York as passengers. The big bag rose rapidly in the air and soon disappeared in a southerly direction.

Although no word had been received from the balloonists up to a late hour tonight, no fear was felt for their safety. It is thought that a desire to avoid notoriety impelled the balloonists to keep their landing place a secret.

MORE DAVAO REBELS KILLED.

Three Fall in Running Fight with Pursuing American Troops.

MANILA, June 30.—Word has been received here that three more of the Davao mutineers have been killed in a running fight with troops. Of the company of native constabulary that mutinied on the Island of Mindanao several weeks ago only thirteen are still at large.

One company of the Twenty-third Infantry and three companies of constabulary are in pursuit with orders to capture or destroy the entire band.

THREE OF THEM BRING SUIT

Augustus Zerega, the Old Shipping Merchant Who Died in 1888, Left the Estate in Trust.

An action was begun in the Surrogates' Court in the matter of the distribution of the estate of Augustus Zerega, prominent in shipping and social life here in the early eighties, who died in 1888, leaving an estate said to be valued at $1,168,424. Two sons and one grandchild—John Theodore Clinton Zerega, William Irvine di Zerega, and Alfred L. B. Zerega—beneficiaries under the will, have applied to the court for an order directing the trustees to deliver to them certain moneys and properties to which they assert, they are entitled.

The petitioners assert that the decedent's will was admitted to probate, and letters testamentary duly issued on Feb. 12, 1889, to Eliza M. Zerega, the widow; John A. Zerega, Theodore Zerega, and Louise A. Barnard, (née Louise A. Zerega,) who qualified as executors and trustees. Subsequently all died or resigned except John A. Zerega of 4 East Twenty-eighth Street, and Mrs. Louise A. Barnard of 26 East Thirty-fifth Street, who are the sole remaining executors.

By his will Mr. Zerega bequeathed all of his real and personal property in trust to the executors and trustees, the rentals and general income therefrom to be paid to his widow, Eliza M. Zerega, during her life and then to be divided into eleven equal parts, one each going to John A., Augustus H., John T., George T., Alfred L. B., Florence and Louise Zerega, Mrs. Louise A. Barnard, (formerly Louise A. Zerega, Azelia Zerega, (now Azelia C. Huntington,) Frederick C. Zerega von Britton, and the remaining one-eleventh to be held in trust for Francis A. Zerega until he should reach the age of 45.

On Nov. 10, 1908, a decree was entered providing for the settlement of the estate, and the executors were ordered to transfer to themselves as trustees personal property valued at $1,168,424, less commissions and expenses. They now hold money and personal property in the sum of $1,100,900, of which Theodore Clinton Zerega and Alfred L. B. Zerega claim one-eleventh and William Irving di Zerega one-thirty-third, as provided for by the terms of the will.

Another provision of the will was to the effect that none of the beneficiaries should receive his or her proportion unless he or she were solvent, and, if insolvent, the bequest was to be formed into a trust, the income on which was to be paid to the beneficiary until he or she should become solvent. In case the direct beneficiary should die the bequest was to go to the lawful issue. During the life of Eliza M. Zerega, the widow, who died on March 26 last, at the age of 100, she received an income from the estate of $60,000 a year, and besides maintaining a home called Island Hall, in Westchester County, gave her sons and daughters $35,000 annually out of the income. This the petitioners allege has been cut off by her death, and that they have received no other moneys from the estate.

Mrs. Barnard, one of the trustees, in an affidavit touching upon the question of the solvency or insolvency of the beneficiaries, states that she is solvent, and believes that Azelia C. Huntington, Florence, Fred C., and John T. Zerega are solvent, but that she doubts the solvency of her co-trustee, John A. Zerega. Furthermore, that she has been perfectly willing to render an accounting, but could not until the will of her mother, Eliza M. Zerega, the life tenant in the estate, was admitted to probate, which was done yesterday.

Surrogate Thomas, in his opinion handed down yesterday, said that the investigation must be confined to the rights of the petitioners, and could not be broadened so as to protect the rights of the other beneficiaries. One of the petitioners is entitled to a fractional part of the estate as a grandchild of the testator, the son of a daughter, whose interest is the eleventh, while the other two are entitled to immediate payment of one-eleventh of the residuary provided he is solvent, but if insolvent his share is bound by a trust for life.

The form of the proceeding, continued the court, is unfortunate, and it would be much better if a general accounting was to be made, either upon the voluntary petition of the executors or in a compulsory proceeding upon the petition of an interested person. As the matter stands now, he says, all the trouble and expense must be incurred and in the end only a limited part of the estate distributed.

KAISER GLAD HIS YACHT WON.

Nevertheless He Dismisses Captain Who Sailed Her in Race.

KIEL, June 30.—Emperor William was very much pleased when his yacht Meteor won the fifty-mile race for big schooners yesterday. As the Meteor passed the finish line twenty minutes ahead of the Germania, his Majesty acknowledged the cheers of the crowds on the excursion steamers by swinging his cap in the air and calling for three cheers for German yacht building. Both the Meteor and the Germania were designed and built in Germany.

His Majesty, in spite of the victory, became dissatisfied with the manner in which Capt. Peters handled the Meteor, particularly the confused character of his orders. After the race he summarily dismissed Peters and appointed Capt. Karp, formerly the skipper of the Empress's Iduna, to command the Meteor.

COLER OUT OF QUARRY CO.

Sold Interest in Medina Before Running for Governor, He Tells Mitchel.

Borough President Coler of Brooklyn was subjected yesterday to further questions in regard to the conduct of his office by Commissioner of Accounts John Purroy Mitchel. Mr. Coler's connection with the Medina Quarry Company, for comments on which he brought a $100,000 libel suit against The Brooklyn Eagle three years ago, was the principal topic of inquiry.

Mr. Mitchel took occasion also to throw a mild bouquet to Mr. Coler, declaring that, despite the inference to be drawn from the inquiry, "we have found many things that are admirable in your office, Mr. Coler, and they will all be set forth in our final report."

President McGowan of the Board of Aldermen was called to testify with reference to the charge made by Mr. Coler on Tuesday that Controller Metz had lied if he said the account of the Borough of Brooklyn in last year's budget had been overdrawn. Mr. McGowan testified that as far as he knew no definite agreement had existed between Mr. Coler and the board, but that it is usually understood that the Borough Presidents can come back for revenue bonds to cover cuts in their budgets.

"Did you ever have any personal connection with the Medina sandstone industry, and how many miles of pavement in Brooklyn have been laid with that material?" asked Mr. Mitchel.

Mr. Coler, in reply, made a statement about his $100,000 libel suit against The Brooklyn Eagle, saying that he had had the case restored to the calendar for retrial, and that he protested against any attempt in this inquiry to "determine the issues now before the courts."

"I don't want to do anything that will affect private litigation," said Mr. Mitchel.

"All right. Go ahead," replied Mr. Coler. "To begin with, I was President of the Medina Quarry Company just before I was a candidate for Governor. I was rapped for it at the time, but I had already resigned. I disposed of my personal interest in the company, but afterward W. N. Coler & Co. loaned it $10,000, secured by stocks and bonds."

IMPORTS FORGING AHEAD.

Brill Clothes

Any concern can produce good clothes to sell at $18.00 to $45.00.

And for the same identical reasons Brill stores sell you more advanced style clothes, of finest fabrics and finest tailoring and trimmings, at $18.00 to $45.00.

Nearly One-Half a Million Dollars Worth of Standard Furniture at 10 to 50 Per Cent. Off.

Adams Building—Third and Fourth Floors.

From the most costly mahogany all the way down the line to the most simple out-door furniture, not one piece that is now on our floor but comes under this rule: twice yearly, samples in furniture must be changed.

It is the custom of many stores to buy furniture from various makers at "a price" in order to create business during the two dullest months of the year.

Furniture bought in this way and made by the maker at "a price" cannot, in the face of things, be so well made as furniture made for a business that is building up and up; a business that is going after the finest furniture trade of New York; a business that will not sell under any circumstances at any price anything less than worthy.

Every piece of furniture in this sale will bear its tag of yesterday and a new green tag, telling what the price will be to-morrow. Metal beds are included; so are bedding, so are bed-couches. Summer furniture is included; so is Mission or Arts and Crafts; the finest mahogany and Circassian walnut—nothing too fine, and nothing too simple for this great furniture sale and there is no exception—everything is 10 to 50 per cent. less than one short day ago!

Upholstery and carpets are in the sale, too. All this season's patterns are being sold; all carpets bought now will be sewed and laid without cost.

Surety Stamps will be given on all furniture purchases—10 with every dollar's worth bought afternoon, twice that number if you buy before 12 o'clock.

CORPORATION TAX CONSUMER'S BURDEN

So Senator Borah Declares—Cummins Says Deficit Will Be $175,000,000.

SENATE DISCIPLINE FAILS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—In the absence of Senator Aldrich, who is off somewhere down the Potomac resting, it was impossible to-day to maintain the iron discipline by means of which the Rhode Islander had planned to wear out the insurgents' opposition. The Senate was late getting a quorum, and it took repeated roll calls to keep one. The income tax was practically the only subject discussed on the floor and Senators Cummins of Iowa and Borah of Idaho were the only speakers.

Both paid their respects to the absent Chairman of the Finance Committee. Mr. Cummins said the Payne-Aldrich bill would leave the country with a $175,000,000 deficit at the end of the fiscal year, 1911. Mr. Borah declared that if it was proposed to lay an additional tax upon consumers in the form of a corporation tax, he would prefer following the course suggested at the beginning of the session by the Chairman of the Finance Committee in favor of the retrenchment in the expenditures of the Government to avoid the necessity for such an additional burden upon the people.

The absence of the iron hand was further indicated when at 1:15 P. M. thirty minutes was conceded to Mr. Cummins to allow him time for refreshment, and again at 5:45 o'clock, when the committee's efforts to hold the Senate in session were overwhelmingly defeated, and by a non-partisan vote of 17 to 34 the adjournment was taken until to-morrow.

With Senator Aldrich away and amendment almost impossible, it is the generally expressed opinion of committee members that the corporation tax will be adopted by the Senate unchanged. Debate, according to the estimate of Senator Flint, who was in charge of the Tariff bill today, will hardly last more than two days longer, and he expects the measure in his charge to be disposed of not later than Saturday.

Cummins Pleads for Stockholders.

Mr. Cummins did not get started till 10:45, but his speech occupied most of the day and was not concluded till late in the afternoon. He dwelt on the unfairness of the proposed corporation levy and pointed out that in the case of railroads in the country, where there is $5,500,000,000 in stock, there is about $80,000,000 in bonds, and that the excess in bonds over stock would be assessed for taxation against the poorer stockholders. The reports of the Inter-State Commerce Commission, he said, indicate that the railroad bondholders get far more of the earnings of the road than do the stockholders. The proportion of the country's wealth represented by bonds, he said, is enormous, and all of that wealth will be exempted from taxation under the proposed amendment.

Estimating at $840,000,000 the amount of money required by the Government for the fiscal year 1911, Mr. Cummins declared that not more than $260,000,000 would be raised from internal revenue, and not more than $340,000,000 would be obtained from customs revenues under the Payne bill, leaving about $240,000,000 to be supplied from some other source. From these figures he drew his conclusion of a deficit of $175,000,000 at the close of 1911.

Senator Borah, who occupied the fragment of the afternoon, left when Mr. Cummins finished, and will continue his remarks to-morrow, said the tax would be passed on for ultimate payment to the consumer while its constitutionality was doubtful.

"This amendment," he declared, "is born of fear. Nobody cares what becomes of it once it has served its purpose in shelving the income tax. Its supporters have not presented it on its merits but for an ulterior purpose."

The Senator from Idaho quoted from speeches by Senator Platt, the late President McKinley, Mr Payne, and Mr. Beveridge to show that such levies as the tobacco and oil war taxes were passed on bodily by the corporations, and that the burden finally fell directly on the shoulders of the consumers.

"Now," exclaimed Mr. Borah, "we come back in times of peace to levy such a tax in the same place, only on vastly more extensive scale. If we do not have to answer for it at the polls two years hence, it will mean simply that the other party has disintegrated. We have rejected the income tax, which could not be transferred, and have accepted in its place this levy, which can be shifted to the poor."

Tax That Can't Be Shifted.

The present system of taxation he described as "cruel and merciless," and the only way to mollify it, he said, is by making special levies on sources of wealth from which the tax cannot be shifted. The inheritance tax is such a levy, he said, but he preferred the income, as thirty-six States already have the inheritance tax.

"Some of these wealthy people," exclaimed Mr. Borah, "haven't even the brains to look after their own fortunes, and have to engage guardians to take care of them."

As to the constitutionality of the income tax, Mr. Borah said that twenty-three Justices of the Supreme Court had held the levy constitutional before by the vote of one man in the balance; the tax was ruled out. He thought this a sufficient argument, he said, against refraining out of "delicacy of feeling" from again sending the case to the Supreme Court for decision.

TO EXCLUDE STANDARD OIL.

Mississippi Action Would Bar from State and Collect $11,000,000 Fine.

JACKSON, Miss., June 30.—Application was made to-day in the Chancery Court of Clay County by District Attorney T. L. Lamb for a perpetual injunction restraining the Standard Oil Company from operating in the State of Mississippi and seeking to collect penalties aggregating $11,000,000 for alleged violation of the anti-trust law of the Commonwealth.

The injunction bill recites in detail the history of the Standard Oil Company and the methods by which it is alleged to have stifled competition in this State.

Under the Mississippi code as amended by the Legislature in 1906, the State is entitled to recover a statutory penalty of $5,000 a day for each specific violation of the anti-trust laws, and the penalties sought to be recovered in this case cover three years. The hearing, it is understood, will take place at West Point during the November term of the Chancery Court.

BROTHER FIREBUG'S VICTIM.

Newark Pyromaniac Confesses He Fired Factory Where Brother Lost Life

George Kueber, a half-witted pyromaniac of 20, who admitted that he possessed a love of seeing property burn, confessed to the Newark police late last night that he set fire to the plant of the Meadow Paper Boxboard Company in Blanchard Street, Newark, early yesterday morning, which resulted in the death of his own brother and a property loss of $75,000. The body of the dead lad, John Kueber, was recovered from the ruins later in the day.

Kueber, after telling his story, which was reduced to writing, signed it in the presence of Police Capt. Christy and several city and county detectives, who were present during his recital. This morning he will be arraigned in court on charges of arson and murder, but it is said that he will probably be sent to an insane asylum, as there is believed to be no question but that he is of unsound mind.

From the time of his arrest early in the morning at the scene of the fire until after 10 o'clock last night Kueber declared that he knew nothing of the origin of the paper factory fire or of the recent fire which destroyed the stable and several horses and mules of the Illinois Leather Company, opposite the paper factory. Then he suddenly broke down, and after a spell of weeping exclaimed that he would tell all about it. This he did, talking slowly so that what he said could be written in long hand.

He said that on Tuesday evening, after he quit work in the paper factory, he went to Hillside Park, in Belleville, returning about 11 o'clock. Instead of going home he went to the paper factory and to a point where he knew there was an elevator on the outside of the mill, through which waste paper was sent outdoors to be carted away. He had been overcome while on the way to Newark by a desire to see a big blaze, and when he reached the waste paper chute he lighted a match and dropped it at the bottom of the elevator.

He lingered only long enough to see that some of the paper was ignited from the flaming match, and then ran to his home at 20 Joseph Street, threw his hat and coat into his room through a window, so that he could say that he was home when the fire started and then ran back to the factory, reaching there just before the engines arrived.

He expressed great regret for the death of his own brother, who was working with about fifteen others on the night shift. One of those who escaped said Kueber's brother was caught by the flames in rushing to escape. Two other men were badly hurt.

Kueber would say little about the recent leather factory fire, and was not pressed on that point.

BOY BURGLAR'S GUN EMPTY.

Lad Trembled as He Covered Detectives and Cried "Don't Shoot!"

Up through the apartment house at the northwest corner of 107th Street and First Avenue went two boys late yesterday afternoon, pursued by Detectives Sammons and Howard of the East 104th Street Police Station, who suspected that the lads had robbed the junk shop of Joseph Taddonio at 431 East 107th Street earlier in the day. On the roof the detectives found no one. They were about to give up the search when from behind a chimney appeared a small hand in which trembled a small revolver, which, it was learned afterward, was not loaded.

"Don't shoot, Mister. We surrender."

The lads were Michael Laconti, 14 years old, of 327 East 107th Street, who had waved the pistol, and Antonio Borelli, 13, of 2,070 First Avenue. Both were thoroughly frightened and on the way to the station house admitted, the detectives say, that they had robbed Taddonio.

The boys broke into the junkman's shop between 5 and 6 o'clock yesterday morning. They opened an old safe, in which they found $21 in cash and a gold watch, which they took.

They were locked up and later sent to the Children's Society. They will be arraigned in the Children's Court this morning. Charles Lumbardo of 234 East 107th Street was arrested for selling the revolver to the boys.

HELD FOR COUNTERFEITING.

Fortunato Rossi Arrested by Secret Service Agents on the East Side.

Fortunato Rossi of 417 East Fourteenth Street, whom the Secret Service men believe to be a dealer in counterfeit bills on the east side, was arraigned yesterday before Commissioner Shields in the United States Circuit Court and held in $5,000 bail for examination this afternoon.

Rossi was arrested on Tuesday evening at Second Avenue and Eighteenth Street by Secret Service Agents Burke and Rubano, who had been trailing him. Just before he was taken, the Secret Service men say, he dropped a newspaper in which were wrapped twenty counterfeit $5 bills bearing the head of Jackson. Frank Alvano, who was with Rossi, was discharged by Commissioner Shields yesterday.

The Secret Service theory of the Rossi arrest is that he has dealt extensively in counterfeit money among the Italian labor colonies within a radius of a hundred miles of New York.

Motor Boats Killing Off the Clams.

Restaurant proprietors are becoming alarmed over the scarcity of Little Neck clams. Fishermen who dig these clams in the many bays of Long Island Sound report that what were formerly excellent clam beds are now practically barren. According to André Bustanoby, proprietor of the Café des Beaux Arts, motor boats are killing off the clams by causing vibrations of the water.

AEROPLANE BALKS, WRIGHT FLIGHT BRIEF

ONE END OF PLANE STRIKES

Guy Wires Give Way and Skid Is Broken—Will Be Repaired in Time for Another Try To-day.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, June 30.—Orville Wright made another flight to-day, which ended, like that of yesterday, after the aeroplane had been up less than a minute. In descending a number of guy wires on the machine were broken, the left tip of the lower plane was slightly damaged, and a part of one of the wooden skids, or runners, was broken. The injuries will be quickly remedied in the morning in preparation for another test to-morrow afternoon.

The Wrights explained to-night that the aeroplane has not yet "found" itself, but that the short flights being made now will quickly discover wherein lie the peculiarities of the machine. As soon as the Wrights find out these peculiarities the management of the aeroplane will be a simple matter, and long flights will then be undertaken.

It was close to 7 o'clock this evening when the aeroplane was brought from the balloon shed and dragged across the parade ground to the starting rail. Orville Wright tried out the engine for some minutes before he had the heavy weights lifted that shoot the aeroplane from the rail. While the propellers were whirring Wilbur walked up behind the machine and studied it intently. Conversation was impossible because of the noise, but by signs he indicated to Orville that something was wrong with the radiator.

Orville climbed into the machine and adjusted the part, while Wilbur directed the operation by signals. Then Orville climbed down again, shut off the engine, and held a brief conference with his brother. A moment later he turned on the engine again, helped adjust the starting rope, climbed into the seat, and was shot into space.

The starting rail had been lengthened by the addition of about ten feet of new track this morning, and the advantage of this was seen immediately. The aeroplane raced down the rail, soared gracefully into the air, and apparently was well off for an extended cruise. Near the end of the parade ground it was at least thirty-five feet up, but when Orville twisted his planes and tipped the machine to take the sweeping curve toward the east it was seen that the engine was not powerful enough to drive it on and up.

A moment after the turn the aeroplane began to descend. It settled quickly and, when the tip of the planes struck the parade ground, there was a puff of dust that resembled the bursting of a shell. Orville felt the jar and at once shut off his engine, coming down in a little hollow, 400 yards from the starting point. The uneven ground proved disastrous to the guy wires running to the horizontal rudder, which were broken. The rudder itself was unscathed.

After making a careful examination of the machine, Orville and Wilbur Wright ordered it taken to the balloon shed, where it was locked up for the night. Early in the morning Charles Taylor, the Wrights' mechanician, will have everything shipshape for another test, in case the weather is propititious.

There was a considerable attendance of members of Congress at the flight to-day. Senators Elkins and Tillman inspected the machine when Orville was testing the engine, while Senator Gore, the blind statesman from Oklahoma, occupied a seat in the Congressional shelter tent and listened eagerly to his wife's recital of the preparations. When the whirr of the powerful propellers was carried to his ears he turned his sightless eyes in the direction of the machine and stood up in genuine excitement.

Gen. James Allen, chief of the Signal Corps, sent a peremptory letter to-day to A. M. Herring, the New York inventor, who entered the contest but has never qualified, that he must produce his machine at Fort Myer to-morrow or suffer the loss of his guarantee.

"C. F. MURPHY" COMPLAINED.

On a Telephone Message Police Clear Stuyvesant Park and Arrest Nine.

In the Night Court last night six men and three women, who had been gathered up in Stuyvesant Park after some one representing himself to be Charles F. Murphy, the Tammany leader, had telephoned to Police Headquarters complaining of the loiterers there, were sent to the workhouse in default of $300 bail each for their good behavior.

Early in the evening Police Headquarters was started by receiving the telephone message from the person who said he was Mr. Murphy. After declaring that there was a choice assemblage of loafers in the confines of Stuyvesant Park the man professing to be the Tammany leader requested the police to clear the park.

Police Headquarters communicated with the East Twenty-second Street Station, with the result that the patrol wagon from that station made three trips to the park. The police gathered up five men on the first trip, three women on the second, and one man on the third.

Before the prisoners were taken to the Night Court, the men in the group were asked what ticket they voted at the last city election. They all replied, "Tammany." They were astonished when told that they had been arrested on the complaint of a man asserting he was Charles F. Murphy, and several asserted that the Republican ticket would be their next selection.

The Story for the "Fourth"

A Husband by Proxy

By JACK STEELE

A tale of love, mystery and adventure in which the services of a handsome young lawyer-detective are engaged by a beautiful girl who must be married by a certain date in order to receive a large inheritance. After entering the girl's employ as mock-husband, the lawyer is engaged by a big insurance company to investigate the death of a man who, the Coroner claimed, died from natural causes. Although the reader can put two and two together, he has by no means reached the sum total of the book. It is a "ripping" good story of the mystery class and bound to be a big seller.

The Bride of the Mistletoe

"To many people James Lane Allen has given a particular and exquisite pleasure yielded by no other writer... In his latest book he has achieved a work of art more complete in expression than anything that has yet come from him. It is like a cry of the soul, so intense one scarcely realizes whether it is put into words or not."—Bookman.

"It is worth waiting for...in the sheer beauty of its thought and language, the perfection of literary art."—New York Globe.

TALKS on TEETH
BY
G. GORDON MARTIN, Inc

Thousands Indorse Martinolar Teeth

The Martinolar method of supplying missing teeth without plates or ordinary bridge work is rapidly driving out all other methods. Teeth put in the mouth by this method are in to stay, solid, beautiful, and, best of all, natural looking and acting teeth. They can't be distinguished from the teeth nature grew in the gums in the beginning.

You can eat with them and chew your food as nature intended, grinding it up so it enters the stomach in proper shape to be assimilated.

The Martinolar method is not painful; we don't cut or bore into the gums; it is not expensive, and it is not to be obtained outside of one of our offices.

How are your teeth?

How many are missing, and what substitutes are you using for those that are missing?

Have you indigestion?

These are the questions we would like you to answer if you will come to one of our offices, or write for particulars.

The teeth deserve to be well taken care of. If they are not in good order the stomach will soon rebel, and then look out for trouble.

From a number of recent letters from grateful patients we submit the following, which is a fair sample of those which come to us from every mail:

"May 20th, 1909.

"320 Fifth Avenue, City:

"After having had trouble with my teeth for a great many years, I came to you about two years ago, and at that time had remaining only three teeth in my upper jaw and four teeth in my lower jaw. With these to build on, you replaced all of my upper and all of my lower teeth, and the teeth have been solid and firm, and have given me the greatest comfort and satisfaction, and I take great pleasure in recommending your work to any one in need of dental services.

"Very truly yours,
"P. B. WRIGHT,
"The Chatsworth,
"72d St. and Riverside Drive, City."

If you are near enough to one of our offices, call by all means.

Don't imagine that a call and examination of your teeth will obligate you to have any work done. We will simply tell you what you should do to preserve teeth and health—and let you be both judge and jury as to whether you will follow our instructions or not.

If you cannot call, you can write for free book, "Martinolar Dentistry," which goes into details.

The reading of this book brings us patients from everywhere.

It is the greatest book on the teeth ever printed, and worth a lot to you if you have need of dental work.

GIANTS DROP A GAME, THEN BEAT SUPERBAS

Wiltse Routed by Brooklyn Batsmen, Breaking the Winning Streak.

MATTY SCORES A VICTORY

Peerless Pitcher Mows Down His Opponents in Second Contest and Shuts Them Out, 3 to 0.

Lumley's Park Slope Delights in an access of fine fury yesterday afternoon fell on Wiltse and hammered him so hard that before Manager McGraw could get him off the slab they broke New York's winning streak. Brooklyn won the first half of the double-header by a score of 5 to 2. The locals drove George of the Tropic Paw to cover in the lucky round. Having tied the tallies in the fourth, they peeled off a quartet of counts in the seventh and then carded one in the eighth, Crandall pitching, just to show they weren't playing favorites. But Manny McGraw didn't mind, for in the second game Christy Mathewson blanked the Superbas 3 to 0, twirling in a way that showed he was at the top of his form.

That opening battle of the double event was a creditable victory for the Lumleyites. McGraw's men resorted to their old trick of chalking before the opposing boxman's range-finder got working. They registered twice in the breakaway on Tenney's tapiet, Doyle's dawdle, a fumble of McCormick's grasser by McElveen, Murray's Texas leaguer, and O'Hara's sacrifice fly. The bases were filled three times in that half, but Bell and his support got themselves out of a tight place swiftly.

Incidents a-plenty, but no more jots until the fourth. In that frame, two down, Bell made a good start toward winning his own game, singling cleanly to McCormickville. He went to third when a muff by Handsome Harry put Burch on second. Bell and Burch scored in swift succession when Clement's lawn-mower was foozled by Doyle Tenney's hardiness aiding the second tally.

Larry Doyle hashed New York's best chance in the seventh. He was on second by virtue of a two-bagger after Tenney flied out. McCormick sent a soarer to Clement, and Doyle, forgetting only that Snodgrass was gone when the ball left the bat, dug out for home instead of keeping in touch with his base—with the logical result that he was doubled up easily on Clem's flip to McElveen.

No such mental lapse occurred in Brooklyn's ranks. The same chapter was one grand, sweet song for the home-hitsmiths. Burch's third hit, Clement's sacrifice, Hummel's leaguer, McElveen's one-bagger, and Lennox's scratch homer added four runs to the showing of the Kings County Cadets, whereupon, save for Brooklyn's seventh run in the next inning, it was all over but the shouting.

But the second struggle—ah, gentlemen sportsmen, take fresh score cards and see how the Giants can play. Kindly observe that Manager John, resolved to perish on the spot—right under the spotlight rather than lose two games to his lowly interborough rivals, sends Matty in. Also take notice, please, that the big fellow is feeling fine and fit. Watch the snap of his whip. See the clear confidence in his face.

"Oh, you Matty!" thunder the Manhattan rooters among the 12,000 fans, and "Get this fellow, Matty," calls Fred Tenney as each Brooklynite hefts hickory. Get 'em Matty does, to the tune of nine strikeouts and a few hits, sending them benchward in a well-nigh unbroken line. He had everything—overs and unders and twisters and blisters. He fooled 'em with the fadeaway again and again. They knew he was fooling them, but they couldn't help it. It was just a pantomime, so far as sticking went on Brooklyn's part. Man after man faced Christy as the ox looks at the butcher; man after man he cut down like sheep in the shambles.

Wilhelm worked for the locals—and work it was! He was steady enough for six rounds, but he blew up in the seventh. In that round, O'Hara down, Devlin, Bridwell, and Schlei singled successively, Matty's out at first and Lennox's go-by to Tenney's grasser giving New York two runs. And in the final the McGrawites recorded once more on Bridwell's trudge, Schlei's second swat, Matty's death at the initial niche, and Tenney's liner to left for a landing.

Keep your eyes on the Giants and don't worry—root. The score:

PIRATES OPEN NEW PARK.

New Home Dedicated and Team Defeated by Chicago.

PITTSBURG, June 30.—The new record for attendance was made here to-day, when 30,339 paid admissions were registered at Forbes Field, when that park, the new $1,000,000 home of the Pittsburg Baseball Club, was dedicated. The game was one of the most exciting seen in Pittsburg in years, Chicago winning from the locals by a score of 3 to 2. Willis allowed but four hits, but Reulbach was invincible with men on bases, and at least four times when a hit meant at least one run for Pittsburg the batter struck out or grounded to the infield.

A coincidence of the dedication of the new park is that twenty years ago, when Exposition Park here was dedicated, Chicago defeated the Pittsburg team. Score:

YANKEES BEAT SENATORS.

Batting Rally Gives Locals Second Consecutive Victory Over Washingtons

The Yankees administered a knockout blow yesterday to Joe Cantillon's Senators at the American League Park, winning by the score of 4 to 2. There was but one session of glee unrestrained during the game, and that was in the third inning, when the score board showed three tallies for the locals. Everything broke exactly right for the Yankees.

The Senators put a run over the plate in the second inning after two men were out. Lake passed. McBride, who advanced to third on Lelivelt's belt to the right pasture and scored on Street's single. Again in the seventh, with two men down, the visitors emerged from their hole and added a second point. Street singled for a starter. Groom put up a skyscraper, which Cree let escape through his fingers. He threw to third to head off Street, but Austin made a bungle of the attempted stop and the ball rolled on; Street romping home during the melée.

Demmitt was the quick-thinking boy in the Yankees' half and let four wide ones pass. Knight tried to be generous and sacrifice, but the Senatorial infield was so slow that he beat the ball to first. Austin also bunted, but luck was with the Yanks and Groom got all tied up. Three men on bases and no one out. It certainly took on a roseate hue. Sweeney hit a high bounder to Donohue, who had to jump in the air, which fact enabled Demmitt to score, and as no one covered the first sack the Yankee catcher was also safe. Lake puled off a clean single, which tallied Knight and Austin. In the fourth essay Austin's hit to right was labeled one bag. He went to second on Sweeney's sacrifice. Cree also singled to midfield, but Lelivelt was too anxious to get the ball aru let it get away from him, Austin scoring. The score:

Boston Fans Hostile to Umpire.

BOSTON, June 30.—Umpire Perrine was escorted off the field by the police at the close of the games to-day on account of some hostility manifested by the spectators, who thought a number of decisions unjust to Boston. Scores:

Johnson Beats Ross In Ring.

PITTSBURG, June 30.—Jack Johnson, the colored heavyweight fighter, to-night outboxed Tony Ross of New Castle, Penn., in a six-round contest given under the auspices of the National Athletic Club at Duquesne Garden. Public opinion willingly conceded that Johnson had the better of the go from start to finish, although a State law prohibits decisions in boxing contests.

It was a fast fight, both men up and coming during the entire six rounds. Johnson, however, seemed to be unconditioned, repeatedly rushing Ross, but seldom landing effectively. The audience shouted wildly whenever Ross landed a telling blow, but hooted Johnson for his apparently rough work in the clinches.

Five Stars In One Race.

What promises to be one of the greatest races in the annals of sport will be contested in the big meet of the Brighton Beach A. C. at Brighton Beach on Saturday. Lawson Robertson, the trainer of the Irish-American A. C., who is promoting the meeting, has obtained the entries of Melvin Sheppard, Emilio Lunghi, Harold Wilson, Harvey Cohn and Frank Riley in the special mile event, and athletic history is sure to be made.

BOWERMAN DEAL IS NEARLY COMPLETED

McGRAW SILENT ON MATTER

The Usual Denials and Some Facts Which Show Which Way the Wind Is Blowing.

Unless John J. McGraw's plans miscarry—and they seldom do—Frank Bowerman is to rejoin the Giants. The giant backstop now going through the motions of piloting the Boston Nationals is worth more to McGraw than he is to President Dovey. McGraw hasn't admitted that, because it isn't a part of Silent John's policy to admit anything. But he has been in negotiations with Bowerman for three days, and last night there was reason to believe the deal was pretty well rounded out, if not complete. It is more than possible Big Frank will don the big mitt for the New York team this week—tomorrow, maybe. On the other hand, minor hitches in the transaction may cause a slight delay in the actual transfer of the big fellow. But that he shall come back is what McGraw intends, and the astute little pilot usually gets what he seeks.

One thing contributing to McGraw's success in this deal is that, on the surface, he has not sought it. He has preserved a foxy attitude of aloofness probably as deceptive to Bowerman himself as it has been to the Boston President. Yet all the time Bowerman has been drawn nearer and nearer to his old job on the Polo Grounds. "Hit 'em where they ain't," is Honus Wagner's batting axiom. "Do it when you don't," is McGraw's managerial method. So, whereas any one talking with McGraw on the subject might conclude that the return of Bowerman was the last thing he desired, those versed in the clever manager's ways would be likely to suspect he not only wanted Frank but was resolved to get him.

Manager John, in the visitors' clubhouse in Washington Park after yesterday's double-header, would not admit he contemplated recovering Big Frank. In fact, he admitted nothing, save that he had been approached in regard to a certain proposed exchange of players by some one acting for the Orphans, and that Bowerman had wired him for an interview in the course of the evening. McGraw father deprecated the possibility of Bowerman's re-enlistment. He did not see how there could be anything in that idea. As a matter of cold, concrete fact, Frank Bowerman has passed the last three nights in Manhattan. He left the Hotel Somerset only yesterday. All that time he was supposed to be first in Boston and then in Philadelphia.

McGraw and Bowerman were to have met in the billiard room last night. There was a slight miscarriage of plans, Bowerman understanding the meeting was to take place elsewhere. McGraw kept in touch with his place of entertainment all evening, telephoning several times to ascertain if Bowerman had arrived. At last, even his patience gave out, and he whirled in his auto to the street entrance of his billiard hall, where he left word that if Bowerman called the big fellow was to be detained at all hazards. A little later McGraw ran across Bowerman up the line, and they went to a quiet place, where they discussed the deal until toward midnight, when John J. telephoned he would not be downtown again until to-day.

DEMORALIZING THE ELECTORATE.

Senator ALDRICH'S engaging frankness entitles him to the thanks of the country. We now know that we are not assuming the corporation income tax because it is a good thing to do, or a necessary thing in the nature of the case, but to avoid a worse thing. This is the choice which our legislators and party managers are accustomed to offer us. "Take TAFT or get me" was the alleged ultimatum to the Republicans of our greatest politician. "Take the corporation tax or get an income tax" is the Hobson choice offered the Senate. The income taxers put the tariff raisers in a hole. The tariff raisers "came back" with something which is thought to put their plaguers in the hole, and Mr. TAFT will receive a tariff bill which it will be possible for him to sign. It is all tactics and no strategy.

The leaders are winning skirmishes and endangering a campaign. There was a chance to smash the income tax on its demerits, but it has been manoeuvred out of the way to avoid an issue which should have been settled never to rise again until a time of National necessity. There was a chance to raise a great issue with TAFT the leader upon his expressions regarding the tariff. That chance is gone. The tariff we shall get will not be one upon which the country can rest with even the small degree of permanency which marked the McKinley and Dingley acts. Successively they raised the country to a higher scale of prices, and the Aldrich-Payne bill may do the same. But the elevation is dangerous, and the next campaign may be expected to follow another convulsion such as is the customary culmination of artifical price elevations.

It is worth while to give a little thought to the question whether our institutions are being worked as they should be, and if not whether that is not as important as anything else in the confused situation. It is to be remembered that we got the Dingley tariff as the result of a campaign in which the soundness of our currency had to be defended. It cannot be alleged that there was a popular mandate to raise the tariff rates. Neither can it be contested that last year there was a popular mandate given to reduce the Dingley rates. There is consequently a double deception of the electorate in the present and future tariff law. Upon this is piled the fact that no popular mandate can be cited in support of the corporation tax. It was never mentioned in the campaign. It was not even a Roosevelt policy. It was the birth of the deliberations of several gentlemen who invented this method of escaping from a political dilemma over the miscarriage of the tariff deliberations. The people who are dissatisfied by the raising of the tariff rates are to be placated by a tax on corporate wealth, and President TAFT is to be relieved from the dilemma of vetoing the Republican tariff of perfidy and dishonor or accepting a general income tax. This may be American politics, as the game is played, but it is not government of the people, by the people, and for the people. In this particular matter we are submitting to the rule of an unelected and irresponsible oligarchy, not imposing the popular will upon the people's servants.

The indictment may easily be lengthened. The Republican platform declared for a postal savings bank scheme, which was abandoned after the Republicans carried the election. The Democratic platform declared the guarantee of bank deposits as of the first importance, preferring it to the postal bank. The people rejected the Democratic Party's platform, and yet bank guarantee laws have been passed in a half dozen Republican States. The point is not the wisdom of the laws, but the nullification of the platform which the people accepted and the application of that which they rejected. This is futile politics. It teaches the electorate that platforms are worthless, and that their votes settle nothing. It is the action of the Legislature which counts, and the popular vote is of no consequence.

Important as any of these considerations are, it is more important that some meaning should be preserved for our campaigns and elections. Be the result of an election what it may, it ought not to be nullified by a cabal of leaders under the pretext that they have been manoeuvred into a difficult position. As the matter stands the President has sacrificed the popular support which he would have had in vetoing a fraudulent tariff, and has received in exchange the support of representatives of the "interests," not of spokesmen of the people. Instead of demanding a tariff law which he could sign with the country's approval, he accepts a hybrid combination against which the country is protesting. It is unfortunate both for him and the country, and is regretted by his best friends.

THE CENSUS BILLS.

The only change of any importance in the Census bills now sent to the President is the provision that the appointees selected for the work must actually have lived for at least one year in the State from which they are named. This is intended to prevent the selection of an undue proportion from the District of Columbia, or from near-by States. The net effect of the provision will be to increase the cost of examinations considerably and to distribute more widely the privilege, such as it is, of obtaining employment under the United States Government. Considering the pay, which is but $600 a year for clerks, and the necessarily temporary nature of the jobs, it does not seem that the privilege can be very valuable. So far as the Nation is concerned, it is, of course, of no consequence whatever, whether subordinates of this sort live in the District or in Oklahoma, but the gentlemen who make our laws for us appear to think that office holding should be scattered widely, even if the bits are tiny.

The final passage of the bills without the provision for patronage which caused Mr. ROOSEVELT to veto the previous bill was undoubtedly hastened by the expectation, which THE TIMES announced some weeks since, that the places should be put in the competitive class by Executive order, if the matter were left to President TAFT. The defeat of the petty grab for patronage is a good thing, not merely because it was so petty and mean in itself, but because it would have seriously increased the cost and lessened the real value of the census.

"RAINBOWS."

We ventured to call attention the other day to a calculation by The Springfield Republican to the effect that a change of less than 100,000 votes in the States whose Senators have resisted the betrayal of party promises as to the tariff would change the elections next year or three years from now. Our contemporary The Tribune has matched this with a calculation that even a smaller change in Democratic votes would have a greater effect in the opposite direction. It is an entirely correct piece of figuring, and The Tribune, which is having a rather hard time in its strictly party relations just now, is entitled to all the comfort it can get from it.

The only significance such calculations can have must, however, depend mainly on the tendency of public opinion. If the Republicans were gaining in popular confidence, if the conduct of their responsible leaders were manly, loyal, courageous, exciting respect and admiration, it would be quite within the range of possibility that a small change of Democratic votes such as The Tribune cites, would occur and would give the party a tremendous success in the next elections. That, so far as we can see, is not the situation. It is the contrary. The Republican leaders are defying a great body of voters whom they expressly sought to enlist and placate last year. They are breaking promises voluntarily made to these voters. They are exciting contempt instead of respect and indignation instead of admiration. This we say not merely from our reading of the signs of the times, but from the plain interpretation of opinion by its accredited representatives in Congress. If the people of the Middle West feel at all as the Senators from the Middle West talk, then great changes are possible. Great changes might come about through relatively small changes in the actual voting. That is one of the chances involved in our electoral system, and when the tide is running as it now is, the men at the helm might with advantage pay attention to it.

PRINCE BUELOW'S "RETIREMENT."

The official announcement that the weary invalid who has borne for so long the worrying burden of the Chancellorship of the German Empire will shortly retire does not bear close examination. The retirement is dependent on a condition which it seems increasingly difficult for the incumbent to fulfill, namely, the passage in the Reichstag of the Government's bills for financial reform. It is not yet a fortnight since the Government was defeated in a desperate effort to pass one of these bills. What reason, then, is there to suppose that the Prince can get his reforms and his release from office within any calculable time?

It is reasonable to suppose that the announcement is intended, in some way, to aid in the passage of the bills, but it is not easy to see how it will do so. So long as Prince BUELOW remains he cannot offer much more favorable concessions than he has already made. These have failed because of the stubbornness of the Agrarians, and that cannot be overcome without a radical change in the distribution of political power, especially in Prussia, or such a threat of change as would scare the Agrarians. Possibly the proposed formation of a combination of business and financial interests for opposition to the Agrarians to which we have already referred may be the movement that is relied on to bring the Agrarians to terms. That would be a serious matter, for such a combination, once operative, would have very great influence, and would tend to modify the whole tenor of public life in Germany. As the situation now presents itself this is, however, the only apparent avenue of escape from the dilemma in which the Government finds itself. It is well to remember that Prince BUELOW frankly told the Conservatives on the eve of his defeat that if they resisted the financial reforms they "took their lives in their hands."

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE FOURTH.

This city never has regularly recurring spectacles or great musical feasts free to the people. New Orleans has her Mardi Gras, to which flock every year people from every section of the country. It proves how well we like a spectacle. Why not have a Fourth of July "Mardi Gras" in every city and town in the United States?

The city need not go to any expense in the matter. Let it all be done by contributions which are to be sent to a designated place. Let every child send in the pennies he is now spending for infernal machines of destruction, and every man and woman who has a grain of civic pride or love of country contribute a share to the pageant. Volunteers in plenty could be found to take part, who would enjoy dressing up as George Washington, Lafayette, or Lord Cornwallis. The children should, of course, have their share in the tableaux and the music.

Should there be an evening procession fireworks could properly be a part of the display. If we really hankered for a noise an uncracked reproduction of the old Liberty Bell, as it was rung by patriotic and excited colonists, would by its ringing rouse the citizens to love and pride of country, in the knowledge that the first toll of that bell helped start a revolution. The children could hunt through their histories and suggest ideas for tableaux. Think of the rich spectacular material in the mingling of Puritans and Indians at the settlement of the Pilgrim colony at Plymouth, in the treaties of WILLIAM PENN, the rallying of the Minute Men, MOLL PITCHER at the cannon, BETSY ROSS, (if it was, indeed, BETSY ROSS,) making the first American flag; LAFAYETTE bidding his young wife farewell on the eve of his departure to these shores, WASHINGTON taking his first command, and hundreds of other incidents both striking and dramatic.

In Paris on the French "Fourth," July 14, which is the day of the Bastille, not a gun is heard nor a cracker banged. Occasional bands of students pass through the Latin Quarter singing, and in the evening the magnificent public buildings are illuminated. Across the Seine the classic architecture of the Chamber of Deputies outlined by bands of light is a picture not soon to be forgotten. The streets are filled with strolling people, groups are seated in the cool Tuileries Gardens, along the Champs Elysées, and in the Bois, but all is as quiet as Fifth Avenue on a Sunday morning. The pandemonium which prevails on our Fourth of July would seem incredible to an untraveled Parisian.

A society which aims to promote the arts, education, and the betterment of humanity was recently formed in this city. It has already appointed a committee to work for a more sane and interesting celebration of the National holiday.

FIGHT THE BROWN-TAIL MOTH.

A somewhat impractical Harvard Professor imported the gypsy moth for experimental study. The egg cluster that one day blew out of his academic window has cost the State of Massachusetts a pretty penny. That Commonwealth spent last year some $300,000 in its campaign against the brown-tail moth, introduced in a shipment of roses from Holland. Now this variety, which manifests a ravenous longing for the foliage of apple trees, white and red oak, willow and elm trees, and is voracious of all manner of shrubbery, vines, flowers, and garden "sass," appears in this State in the neighborhood of a gentleman who has had dealings with a firm of Boston nurserymen.

The brown-tail moth should have short shrift. Its fecundity is amazing. The poisonous nature of its contact with human individuals is undoubted, as our brethren of Massachusetts will testify. They permitted its spread, nevertheless, before resorting to methods for its extermination. Its appearance near Rye, on the line between this State and Connecticut, has been under official surveillance almost from the beginning. It may be effectually stamped out. We trust that the Agricultural Departments of both States will be lavish in spending money to this end.

HEALTHY DISEASE SPREADERS.

In justice to herself and to the community the case of MARY MALLON should be decided speedily. If it is true, as the testimony of Dr. GEORGE A. SOPER and of other physicians indicates, that twenty-eight cases of typhoid fever have followed her successive engagements as cook in various families, and that she is still a carrier of virulent typhoid germs, obviously the first proceeding is not to set her free. She should in her own interest submit to examination, and to operative treatment, if that be found necessary. Her troubles will not cease until she has a certificate—not of health, for she is admittedly immune to the disease—but that she is not a carrier of disease to persons who are not immune. Her case has gained a notoriety that will follow her, and will deprive her of a means of livelihood until the doubt about her unique propensity is dispelled.

That it is possible for healthy persons to carry about and to distribute the germs of disease is the testimony of the bacteriologists. Dr. SIMON FLEXNER, head of the Rockefeller Institute, says in The Popular Science Monthly for July that the surfaces of the body are always covered with the germs of suppuration, the mucous membranes of the throat and nose are "constantly" invaded with the bacilli of pneumonia, and recurrently with those of diphtheria, tuberculosis, and meningitis. He adds:

> The intestinal mucous membrane supports a rich and varied bacterial flora among which are several potentially harmful species, and sometimes, even under conditions of health, the bacilli of typhoid fever, of dysentery, and in regions in which cholera is endemic, or during its epidemics, of cholera bacilli.

Of course it is unusual that a healthy individual should carry enough dangerous bacteria to be a source of infection to others who are healthy. The case of MARY MALLON is extraordinary. Somebody may have blundered in diagnosing it. The examination which she is opposing would reveal such a blunder.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Lesson from a Loyalist.

We are not ourselves acquainted with any of "those Americans" mentioned by J. S. ROBINSON in a vivacious letter we printed yesterday, "who think that the two wars with Great Britain were an uninterrupted procession of American victories." There may be some such, however, and it is a fact that those of us who know of our country's early history only what we learned from the school text books of twenty and forty years ago have some queer notions as to both the men and the events of those stirring times. Still, we are all aware that the fathers had some pretty severe experiences and that not quite everybody on our side was a death-defying hero with no other thought than that of getting into the forefront of battle and staying there without regard to terms of enlistment.

And our misinformation is mostly as to details, more or less inconsequential. That our general impression is right the event showed, at least so far as the Revolution is concerned. The procession of American victories did, indeed, suffer some rather dreadful interruptions, but the line always reformed, and we did win what we fought for, while the Britishers, though they weren't actually beaten, did at last get up and get out, abandoning what has since turned out to be the finest piece of real estate any European Government ever owned.

Mr. ROBINSON has some excuse for smiling at the Bunker Hill Monument, but the little battle there—or near—had some extremely important consequences, and, as it is quite certain that the English will never commemorate them, or call public attention to their significance, why shouldn't we do so, even though we were driven off the hill? We weren't long in getting back.

And then those dear Tories, or Loyalists, as Mr. ROBINSON prefers to call them. No doubt they were a respectable folk, and, like most conservatives, honestly and sincerely attached to the system of which they alone were the agents and beneficiaries. No doubt, too, they were treated with something less than magnanimity after the war was over, and carried back to England or up into Canada the bitter memory of some cruel wrongs inflicted upon them by the triumphant rebels. Theirs, however, was simply a case of opposing the march of Manifest Destiny, and they were naturally unpopular with those who had keener eyes for the future.

The Right to the End Seat.

An elderly resident of Greenwich, Conn., came down to the city this week, as it is the wont of his tribe to do whenever opportunity offers, but he came bringing war, not peace, and before nightfall he found himself under arrest, charged with assaulting—or, to particularize, with choking—a young man whom he fortuitously neighbored on a Fourteenth Street car.

The young man, as was revealed later in police court, had refused to "move over" from his end seat when a woman struggled to enter the car, and the Greenwicher deemed the occasion one that demanded the impressing of suburban ideas of courtesy upon a New Yorker. His method of doing it was by taking the young man by the throat and delivering a brief lecture, emphasized by sundry pressures and shakes. Presumably the lesson was needed. The Magistrate before whom the Greenwich instructor in manners was taken evidently held the need highly probable, for he discharged the prisoner, remarking as he did so that, while he did not advise the choking of such fellows, he wasn't going to punish anybody who performed the unpleasant task.

This announcement seems to deprive the so-called street car hog of all protection except that which he can give himself. He has been outlawed, somewhat informally, to be sure, but still effectively, and his travels about the city are likely to be enlivened by many stirring episodes—if the elderly resident of Greenwich finds emulators at once as sturdy and as determined. Yet the man who, having secured an end seat in an open street car, sticks to it with some pertinacity, would have something to say for himself if he dared to speak. He might declare, for instance, that as a general rule the person already in a car is apt to reach his destination before a later comer does, and that the latter might as well climb over him on entering as he over the later comer on getting out. Then the principle of first come first served has more or less application to this question of proprietorship in end seats, and not infrequently the man who was not an "end seat hog" would give up his more agreeable position to a man who was one—which would be hard.

But of course circumstances alter these cases, as they do others. He who won't facilitate the mounting of high car steps by the skirted sex well deserves to be choked, and elderly residents of Greenwich, Conn., who do it should receive a vote of thanks, not mere immunity from a fine.

Striking Against a Machine.

According to report a big typewriter factory up the State is to be closed because some of its employes have struck against the introduction of a machine to do work—the adjustment of the type on the type bars—which has hitherto been done by hand!

This seems like an echo from another age, for, of course, "labor" never suffered permanent injury from any such facilitation or cheapening of manufacture, and attempts to prevent it, once numerous, long since came to be generally recognised as utterly hopeless as well as utterly foolish.

The making of this typewriter will doubtless go on somewhere else, if not in that particular town, and it will certainly go on with the help of any machines that will lessen the cost of production and increase output.

THE YOUNG CRETANS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The approaching withdrawal of the garrisons of the powers from Crete makes the situation there acute. Unless, with the consent of the powers, the island be allowed to accomplish the ambition of its inhabitants and unite itself with Greece, we shall see another explosion of revolution with the accompanying sacrifice of the best lives.

It was my privilege, a few years ago, to come for ten days into relationship with young and middle-aged men, who had taken part in the last Cretan revolution, and also to pass an evening in the company of Venizelos, their leader, and the one who (as I understand from the press) is now in control. I had taken a Greek steamer from the Harbor of the Peiraeus for the purpose of inspecting the palaces of the Minoan era. On reaching deck, the morning after our embarkation, I found there quite a group of Cretans, some of them recent graduates of the University of Athens, others, men in middle life, the professions and business. All had taken part in the recent outbreak, and, with its collapse, had escaped to the mainland. With the proclamation of amnesty they were returning to Crete. We became quite intimately acquainted during the trip, and I had excellent opportunity to learn of the spirit that inspired their action, as that of their forefathers.

The population of Crete is composed, save for a few tens of thousands, of Greek Christians. I have not clearly in memory the exact figures, but my impression is that out of some three hundred thousand, not more than thirty thousand are Turks. These Moslems do not speak Turkish save in rare instances, and only the most highly educated among them read that language. My companions assured me that these so-called Turks were the descendants of renegade Christians; but with regard to that I cannot speak with confidence. Among the Greeks of the island, as one finds throughout Greek lands, pride in the past burns with constant glowing flame. I have heard from the lips of my guides in various parts of the mainland, or when looking forth from the heights of Corfu, as in Crete, the exclamation "I am a Greek!" and therein sounded the pride of having right of inheritance in the glories of Hellenic achievement. To become reunited to the centre of Greek national life is the aspiration of the Greek everywhere, an aspiration justified where, as in Crete, an overwhelming majority of the population is of Greek blood and Christian faith.

One of the younger men, the most intimate friend I formed during the period, had lost a brother fighting for the Greek cause in Macedonia, and both his father and himself had shared in the recent revolution. He was, by porfession, a teacher, and certainly, for a period of time, had blasted his career. Indeed, on our disembarkation, he was for some alleged cause arrested, and only with difficulty could his release be secured. I have always attributed to my association with him the fact that on my return to the Peiraeus, I experienced great difficulty in passing the customs. My passport was demanded; I had none, and for a time it looked as though I would be sent back to Crete. Only my insistent assurance that I was an American and should only remain in Athens two days overcame the objections to my landing.

The spirit wherewith that revolution had been entered upon, as well as those which preceded it, was clearly brought out in our conversations. It was the will of God, these men said; therefore, sure of accomplishment that Crete should be reunited to the centre of Greek life. "But," I objected, "is there no other way to accomplish this than by entering upon these revolutions, for you know well before you take up arms that your cause is hopeless; the garrisons of the great powers occupy the places of vantage, and neither they nor your Suzerain will permit the accomplishment of your wish. Every armed uprisal costs the blood of your best young men, those your nation most needs for its uplift." "Yes," they replied, "we are well aware of this, but if we fold our hands and consent to the fate imposed upon us, no advance will be made toward the goal; every fresh attempt brings us one step nearer, till, finally and inevitably, God's will shall be accomplished."

I am always reminded, when the scene recurs to me of the opening stanzas of the "Iliad"—the sending untimely to Hades the many mighty souls of heroes and the conclusion of the poet that the will of God was being accomplished.

We cast anchor for a time, in the port of the capital, Canea, and, at a club that evening, I had an opportunity of making the acquaintance of Venizelos. I sat by his side for an hour or more, while his compatriots acclaimed him and brought to him their farewells, for he was about to take passage for Greece to bring the Cretan cause to the attention of those in power. I found him a man of high culture and entire consecration. My companions told me that he was not simply one of the best educated, but of the noblest and most philanthropic men of the island, intelligently devoted to the people's interests.

It was one of the rare experiences of my life to ask and answer questions regarding Crete and America, and I there learned what I have learned in many lands, that the hopes of freedom lovers the world over depend largely upon the solution by America of the problems of democracy.

At this critical moment in the history of Turkey and of Crete, is it not possible that some agency can be set at work that shall save the pride of the sovereign land, strengthening rather than weakening its new liberties, and, at the same time, help Cretan Greeks to achieve that national ambition for whose attainment so many generations have offered up their best lives?

Baiting the Tarantula.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In order to help "M. F. H." out of his tarantulaic dilemma, allow me to suggest that he tie a well-baked wheat cake to a slim piece of rattan 8 feet 7 8-16 inches long, and hold this uplifted in his right hand. In his left hand he should have some Newark baked beans. When your puzzled correspondent sees the tarantula he should look at him steadily with his right eye, throw the beans at him with the left hand, and swat him on the front claws with the flapjack. In conclusion I would state that in 1879 I killed twenty-eight tarantulas in one afternoon with an ordinary, everyday balestick.

Warmly Dressed Letter Carriers.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

May I in this letter ask your interest in the coats worn by the postmen of Manhattan during this torrid weather? The cloth itself is very heavy, and because of the great weight of the mailbag the shoulder upon which it swings is heavily padded. Cannot alpaca or a thin material be used, or, better still, would any coat at all be necessary? J. H. F.

HOW TENNESSEE WENT DRY.

Saloons Closed Out Their Stocks at Low Prices Before Midnight.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 30.—The statute extending the provisions of the "four-mile" law to the entire State became effective at midnight to-night. Under the provisions of this law it is unlawful to sell or tipple liquors, wines, ales, or beer as a beverage in Tennessee. The manufacturers' bill to prohibit the manufacture of liquors does not become operative until Jan. 1.

The retailers of Nashville state that they will not attempt to evade the law, and as far as can be learned no test of the retail law is to be made in Davidson County. Lawyers have been retained in Nashville and other cities to test the prohibition measures as they apply to manufacturers and wholesale dealers.

In Chattanooga and Memphis, it is understood, test suits will be brought by retail dealers as well as by manufacturers and wholesalers.

Gen. Jefferson McCarn, Attorney General of Davidson County, takes the position that liquors cannot be sold in Tennessee either at wholesale or retail. He says that his office will vigorously prosecute all violators. A number of clubs have been organized in the larger cities of the State, whose members will keep individual stocks of liquors to be supplied by dealers outside of the State. The persons who have obtained charters for such clubs state that they were advised by counsel that such organizations could be maintained without violating the law.

Nashville was crowded to-day with hundreds of people from near-by towns to witness the going out of liquor in this State. All kinds of liquors were sold at slaughter prices, and the saloons did a large business.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., June 30.—Although the permanent closing of saloons in Memphis was quite general after midnight, it is rumored that a number will open for business in defiance of the State-wide Prohibition bill.

BREAK IN ERIE CANAL.

Various Authorities at Odds Over the Causes of It.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., June 30.—A break in the Erie Canal is being repaired as expeditiously as possible at Spencerport. Henry Kunze, Assistant Superintendent of Public Works, has two forces of men at work, fifty on the day shift and an equal number for night work. The concreting of the culvert arch which caused the break is proceeding rapidly, but navigation will be held up until Saturday. Mr. Kunze declares that the break was due to defective work when a culvert was changed to conform to the new prism of the canal, and that the barge canal contractors on the work must stand the expense of the break.

Resident Engineer Thomas J. Morrison insists that Supt. Kunze's men did not properly care for the leaks, which in an incipient form appeared two weeks ago. Other canal experts blame the engineers at Albany who made the plan for changing the culvert.

Winslow M. Meade is expected here, and an investigation is expected to cause an upheaval in barge canal circles.

MANHATTAN BEACH.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Referring to the letter which appeared in your issue of June 25, signed by Henry Hall, in regard to train service to Manhattan Beach, in order that Mr. Hall and others who might have read his communication will understand the situation, I beg to advise you as follows:

In 1904 the railroad company, the hotel company, and the land company at Manhattan Beach entered into a contract whereby the railroad company would give up the land which it occupied at the terminal near the Manhattan Beach Hotel and would relocate at a point toward Brighton, where the new location now is, so that the land company could carry out its scheme of lot and street development. The land company has been delayed in its operation, and this contract has been extended from year to year, and this year we were requested by the land company to move out so that it could complete its streets, and after we had contracted for a new station we did move out. There has been some delay, however, in getting the new station started, and also delay on the part of the land company in completing its streets; therefore we have arranged to relocate the tracks which ran into the old terminal, and by to-morrow or the day after we will be operating trains into the Manhattan Beach Hotel platform, as we have done in the past. RALPH PETERS,

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In to-day's issue of THE TIMES, Mr. Pinckney's letter expresses all that there need be said in reference to adjusting the clock so that there would be two hours' daylight added to each day. A bill passed in Congress accomplishing this would be of untold benefit to all people who work. The only objection that may be said about this idea is that unless the whole country adopt this scheme there would be no end of confusion in transacting inter-State business. Each locality setting the clock to suit themselves, as in the case of Cincinnati, would be of great harm to the scheme.

Would urge you to give as much publicity to anything that may be said in reference to above as you can. J. H. MITCHELL.

The Chaperon.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Apropos of a recent letter appearing in your paper, suppose we consider what has followed the passing of the chaperon—a constantly increasing tendency and practice among young girls of all classes and conditions to submit to disgusting and dangerous familiarities from men, beginning in thoughtless love of fun but often ending in unbridled license and tragedy.

More power to the chaperon. It is the highly cherished and much-boasted freedom of our women that makes it safer to cross "Death Avenue" blindfolded than to marry a New York City girl. OBSERVER.

Sunday Fireworks.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Mayor McClellan has filed an affidavit in the moving-picture show cases stating that six-day licenses are issued in pursuance of a policy for the proper observance of Sunday, and because he has received numerous complaints.

Why does he not make it a part of his policy to prevent at this season of the year the firing of guns and fireworks on Sundays, which annoy and endanger the lives of more people than any moving-picture show? FRANK P. CAMBRIA.

A FATAL FLAW.

To put on ills and worrying
A ban.

All men who in such prisons live

Unpent by stone and wooden bars!
The stars!

And yet—and yet—regarding it
One little thing recall we should,
To wit:

'Twould have one drawback which whole scores

A WOMAN WHO IS GRATEFUL

Replies from merchants, manufacturers, and other business men to the advertisements of the "men over fifty," published in Sunday's TIMES, continued to flow into THE TIMES offices yesterday, the same mail also bringing grateful letters from those who had advertised.

"There is a man in Manhattan," he wrote, "quoting from an article in THE TIMES of Monday, who is 52, but feels like he is only 40. He is a good penman and mathematician, and has had long experience in collecting for real estate firms and institutions. He says he is only too willing to work and has high references. Please send me this man."

J. Glockner, the costumer of 16 West Nineteenth Street, writes that he will give a job as bookkeeper to one of the men over fifty who advertised in THE TIMES on Sunday, and pay according to the man's ability. Applicants may call on Mr. Glockner at his office.

> I thank you most sincerely for your courtesy and liberality in permitting me to avail myself of your advertising space in common with 168 fellow-victims of the unfortunate microbe that incapacitates men from 50 to 60 as accountants, correspondents, commercial travelers, authors, statesmen, doctors, clergymen, or, in fact, any place where ripe experience, combined with a sound constitution and good health, counts for anything.

Two letters received yesterday present sides of the picture not yet made prominent—the satisfaction and appreciation of the employer of the man or woman over 50, and the happiness of such a person to find again employment and a good home. A woman correspondent writes:

> Allow me, a subscriber to your paper, to thank you for the good work you are doing for the unemployed men over fifty. A week ago, by a rare good chance, I engaged for my mother and myself a woman servant 6[illegible] years old. I was looking for something rather special and moderate wages, and have found a gem. It is not a new broom, but a valuable domestic, whom I will make concessions to if need be, and she is happy in our home.
> Let the man over fifty, even over seventy, not despair. I could quote too many instances of superb fire and success topped by snowy hair. Wrong will be made right, and the people will be indeed grateful to THE TIMES for its effort in behalf of the old men.

A second letter comes to THE TIMES through Miss Belyea, agent of the Charity Organization Society's Handicap Bureau, who obtained employment for the writer of the letter on a farm in New Jersey. It is full of gratitude to Miss Belyea, and expresses his complete satisfaction with his new surroundings.

> I pen this to ask pardon in not writing at a much earlier date. I intended to call on you when I was in the city, but rain prevented me. I must say I cannot thank you enough for obtaining for me this home (none better) with fine people. Of course, as the work is light, so also is the pay, but I am perfectly satisfied and happy. I came out here with him on May 19. I have about 25 chickens and 100 little chicks and a small garden to look after, and fine people to work for.
> I have no work on Sundays, and have one or two days a month to myself. The living, I think, is something like that obtained at the Waldorf-Astoria—anyway, it would cost me in the city $1 a day for the healthy food I get.

Advertisements from men and women over 50 out of jobs for next Sunday's paper are already coming in rapidly. They must all be in by to-morrow at 12 o'clock to be published, and may be sent either to the main office of THE TIMES, Times Square; the Downtown Office, 8 Spruce Street, or the Wall Street office, 30 Broadway.

DIRECTORS NOT CONSULTED.

Wetmore Says Dresser's Loans to Shipbuilding Trust Were Unauthorized.

SARATOGA, N. Y., June 30.—Charles W. Wetmore of Oyster Bay, L. I., who was a member of the Executive Committee of the Trust Company of the Republic, which is alleged to have sustained financial losses through investments made by Daniel Leroy Dresser, its President, in the United States Shipbuilding Company, testified to-day in the trial of the action brought by Charles H. Kavanaugh against the former directors of the company, stated that the question of loans to the shipbuilding syndicate was not brought before meetings of the Executive Committee.

The witness stated that at the meeting of the Executive Committee on Sept. 9, 1902, President Dresser asked for authority to guarantee loans in the company's name. In explanation Mr. Dresser said that there had been a delay in collecting the French underwriting, and that this necessitated negotiating loans.

The witness declared that he objected to this request, and demanded of Mr. Dresser an explanation of the causes leading to it. At a subsequent interview, Mr. Wetmore said, he was told by Mr. Dresser that early in August large loans had been made or guaranteed to finance the shipbuilding company, and that Dresser admitted this had been done without consulting the Directors or counsel for the company. Mr. Wetmore testified that he subscribed to $200,000 in shipbuilding securities when the bonds were being underwritten. He became a Director of the trust company at the request of Mr. Dresser on March 27, 1902, and held office until Dec. 23, 1902.

Lewis Nixon, who was President of the United States Shipbuilding Company, attended this morning's hearings in the trial and will appear as a witness this afternoon.

ROCKEFELLER IN CLEVELAND.

To Remain Till September—Has Nothing to Do with Pastor's Quarrels.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, June 30.—John D. Rockefeller and Mrs. Rockefeller arrived here to-day to spend the Summer at their Cleveland home, Forest Hill. They were accompanied by Mrs. Rockefeller's sister, Miss Spelman, and about fifteen servants. Mr. and Mrs. Rockefeller will remain here until about Sept. 15.

Notwithstanding the report of Mrs. Rockefeller's illness she appeared to be in her usual condition, and was reported to be quite well. She was assisted to an automobile by Mr. Rockefeller and an attendant. Mr. Rockefeller appeared to be in his usual good spirits.

He was questioned regarding the reported rupture between Dr. Charles A. A[illegible] his New York pastor, and Dr. William Bustard, pastor of the Euclid Avenue Baptist Church, which he attends while here, but refused to make any comment other than to say he had nothing to do with their quarrel. Mr. Rockefeller is Superintendent of the Euclid Avenue Baptist Sunday school.

HAMMERSTEIN TELLS OF HIS OPERA PLANS

PLANS A GREAT SEASON

Having rolled up his sleeves and prepared for work Oscar Hammerstein gave out a statement of his plans yesterday for the coming season at the Manhattan Opera House. The operas he will present for the first time here are Strauss's "Elektra" and "Feuersnoth," Massenet's "Herodiade," "Griselidis," and "Sapho"; Erlanger's "Aphrodite," Fevrier's "Monna Vanna," Hubay's "Violin Maker of Cremona," and Victor Herbert's new opera "Natoma." The book of this opera, which is in English, was written by J. D. Redding. Mr. Herbert is putting the final touches on the score, and the production is scheduled for January.

Three more or less separate seasons, with separate companies, are announced by the impresario for the coming year. First will come the educational season of opera at popular prices, which will open on Aug. 30. Then during the regular season will be given a series of the light French operas-comiques and operettas.

"My sojourn in Europe was devoted to the recruiting of the ensemble for my opera company, the obtaining of new operas, the formation of an entire company for the operá-comique and the operettas, and the creation of an opera company with material absolutely new to America for one of the most important experiments in my operatic career. This is for what I can justly term the educational season, which is to open the Manhattan Opera House on Aug. 30 and continue until Nov. 15, when the regular subscription season will begin.

"My object in establishing this new company is to create more operagoers, to impart to the masses of our population the beauties and uplifting sentiments of opera, and to do alone what the Governments and municipalities of Europe strive to do by the erection of Opera Houses and continued subvention.

"From a commercial point of view such an effort by a single individual, unaided by subscriptions or contributions from the wealthy, may be termed foolhardy, but as I am in possession of my own Opera House, equipped with every possible adjunct for opera performances, and, as monetary considerations are not entering into my efforts in this direction, the solution depends upon the interest the public will take.

"To allow the masses to enjoy opera performances the prices are to be exceedingly reasonable, but the performances will be of a character and standing bordering on those that the New York audiences demand during the regular season. The cheapness exists only in the prices.

Two-Language Artists.

"Inasmuch as the preliminary season is to have a répertoire of operas in Italian and French, it was necessary, in order to avoid the expense of engaging a double company, to select artists who could sing in both languages. The difficulty of getting such a force can hardly be overestimated. I ransacked the Opera Houses of Europe, and now find myself in possession of an ensemble numbering twenty-four singers, which would be a credit to any Opera House."

The director then told how, after he had scoured Paris for singers for this, he met Herr Dippel, who begged him with tears in his eyes to recommend a singer for a part in "La Fille de Madame Angot," which is to be given at the New Theatre.

"I couldn't recommend anybody because I had taken all the best of them," said Mr. Hammerstein, and his eyes sparkled.

"The great new tenor, Frederico de Caraza," he continued, "Marguerite Sylva, a New York girl; Miranda, a coloratura soprano of European repute, and Mlle. Valdarez, a contralto of phenomenal range, are but a few of this remarkable list of singers which I will present during the educational season. And when it is taken into consideration that the first week's repertoire will consist of performances of 'Le Prophète,' 'Lohengrin,' 'Aïda,' 'Carmen,' and 'La Juive,' that the full Manhattan Opera House chorus and orchestra will participate, and that the prices in the orchestra stalls, with the exception of a few rows, will be $1.50, and decreasing in the upper parts to as low as 50 cents, the undertaking should cause the music-loving people of New York to rally to its support.

"The other great novelty of my season is my new organization for opera comique and operetta. The singers engaged for my three companies will number seventy-eight for first parts and fifty for second parts."

Speaking of his novelties Mr. Hammerstein was particularly enthusiastic about Hubay's "Violin Maker of Cremona," which he heard in Budapest. He said he had heard "Elektra" in Berlin, Vienna, and Dresden.

"I preferred the Viennese production," he said. "To be most effective 'Elektra' must be fired like cannonading. It is a series of musical shots. It must stun you. That is what the Viennese performance did."

PORTE V. RANSOM WEDS MRS. BARKER

ONLY TWO WITNESSES

WANTAGH, L. I., June 30.—In the rectory of the Memorial Congregational Church here to-day the Rev. P. S. Braithwaite married Mrs. Edith M. Barker, widow of George A. Barker, and Porte V. Ransom, son of the ex-Surrogate of New York County. The wedding was very quiet, only Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Doncaster of this place being present as witnesses.

The party drove to the rectory in an automobile and went to the home of the Doncasters after the ceremony. Shortly afterward Mr. and Mrs. Ransom were driven to Patchogue, where they had dinner, and then continued to Huntington, where they will spend their honeymoon.

No reason was given for the quietness of the wedding, but it is a fact that both Mr. Ransom and his bride are widely known through lawsuits in which both have figured in recent years. This was Mr. Ransom's second venture in matrimony, and the difficulties of himself and his first wife in dissolving their wedding bonds occasioned considerable public interest.

Mrs. Barker appeared in the courts as a defendant in a suit instituted by the two daughters of her husband by his first wife to have set aside the will by which all of Mr. Barker's estate, amounting to half a million dollars, was willed to his widowed bride of two months. The suit was fought through two courts, resulting in a settlement, when the Appellate Division reversed a verdict awarding victory to the daughters and authorizing a new trial.

Mr. Ransom, who is a member of the New York Athletic, the Manhattan, and Union League Clubs, and a lawyer with offices at 38 Park Row, obtained a divorce from his wife in April, 1906, and this decree was affirmed two years later by the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court. Considerable interest was aroused in the case because of the fact that Mrs. Ransom had already obtained a divorce and had married again.

The first Mrs. Ransom was Miss Eva Byrd Hill, a daughter of Frank T. Hill and Mariette Byrd Miller Hill, and was born at Culpeper, Va., in 1869. When she was fourteen months old her parents died, and Miss Hill was adopted by a grand aunt, who brought her to this city, where she met Ransom and was married to him in this city on June 4, 1890. The couple lived together and had two children, Elizabeth Miller Ransom, now 15 years old, and Carter Saunders Ransom, now 11 years old.

Soon after the birth of the son Mrs. Ransom alleged that the conduct of her husband underwent a change, and finally she left him and returned to her home in Virginia. She returned to him afterward, only to leave him again shortly and begin suit for divorce at Madison, Va., her counsel being Congressman James Hay of Virginia. Service was made on Ransom through publication in Virginia, and in September, 1905, Mrs. Ransom won her suit. Five years later she married George L. Browning, a well-known lawyer of Washington and law partner of Congressman Hay.

Although he might have contested the suit at any time within three years of the granting of the decree, Ransom did not do so but after his former wife's marriage to Browning he began his suit here for divorce. Justice Dowling took the view that he had never been served legally in the Virginia suit, which, consequently, was invalid, and awarded a decree to him which was later sustained.

The woman who has now become Mr. Ransom's second wife was married to George Barker two months before his death, which occurred about three years ago. Mr. Barker was the owner of a fine home in Baldwins, L. I., and a yacht. His second wife was Miss Edith M. Teio, a Canadian girl. Where she and Mr. Barker first met is not known, but she visited him at his home and practically took charge of his household affairs for nearly a year before their marriage.

In contesting his will leaving everything to his widow, Mr. Barker's daughter by his first wife, Mrs. Ashton Parker and Mrs. Walter Scott, both of this city, contended that undue influence had been exerted upon their father, and that because of excessive drinking he was not in his right mind when he made the will. They won their suit to have the will set aside, but the Appellate Division reversed the verdict, and rather than continue the suit the contending parties effected a compromise which is said to have been satisfactory to Mrs. Barker.

PYTHON ATTACKS ACTRESS.

Slips Muzzle and Bites Dreamland Snake Charmer Viciously.

When Matihara, the Hindu snake charmer with Bostock's, in Dreamland, pulled an 18-foot python from its box in the show arena last night the audience got an extra thrill for its money, for the python slipped a leather muzzle which had been fastened over its head, and, winding itself rapidly about the girl's neck and body, sank its fangs into her left shoulder, rapidly wrenching them down through her arm to the elbow, leaving the flesh almost in ribbons.

The audience became panic stricken. Several women fainted and others ran out. Bonavita, who was awaiting his turn to appear, ran into the arena, and with his one arm tried to pull the python from the girl. Attendants joined him, and at last they yanked the reptile off. Then the girl fainted.

Bonavita carried her to the Dreamland Hospital, where Dr. Frank E. Smith cauterized her wounds. Her arm swelled to twice its normal size, but the physician said that he hoped the immediate cauterizing of the wounds would prevent blood poisoning.

MISS MARION LAWSON WEDS.

SCITUATE, Mass., June 30.—Miss Marion Lawson, second daughter of Thomas W. Lawson, this afternoon became the bride of James Fuller Lord of Chicago, at Dreamwold, the magnificent Lawson estate at Egypt, on the South Shore. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. John W. Suter of Winchester, the couple standing under an old apple tree and kneeling at an altar rail beneath a bower of roses and mountain laurel.

From the famous tower the chimes played the Wedding March from "Lohengrin," and from the tall flagstaff fluttered the largest American flag in existence.

The bride's attendants were her younger sisters, the Misses Dorothy and "Bunny" Lawson, and the matron of honor was Mrs. Eben Stanwood. The bridegroom's attendants were Eben Stanwood, Arnold Lawson, and Messrs. Veree and Booth of Chicago. Mr. Lawson gave away his daughter.

After the ceremony the party returned to Dreamwold Hall and later to a big tent in the rear of the house, where a buffet luncheon was served.

At 6 o'clock there was a vaudeville entertainment in the big stable. At 8 o'clock the dance followed, with a grand march led by the bride and bridegroom.

The programme for the dance contained between the order of dances some of Mr. Lawson's original verses. The programmes are bound in light blue leather and bear the words: "Marion's wedding day."

Mr. Lawson in his arrangements did not overlook the children, and for each there was a big box of candy, which bore the inscription: "Dreamwold kiddies to the wedding."

More than 250 invitations to the wedding celebration this evening were sent out.

Title of nobility; very old and of high rank may be acquired in legitimate way by person of large wealth and of good social station. Answer by letter. W. E. Lorenz, 14 West 100th Street.

This advertisement set a good many young people, more especially young women, at fabricating airy romances yesterday when they saw it in a morning newspaper.

But just what is behind it is still a mystery, for Mr. Lorenz will only divulge that he inserted the advertisement for a friend, who is young, handsome, and noble. He will not admit, however, that this friend needs the money, though that might almost go without saying.

Mr. Lorenz is something of a mystery also. He only moved into the West 100th Street apartment yesterday, and has only a suitcase with him. He is a big, pleasant-spoken man, with a sandy beard, who works only at night, and leaves word to be called at 4 P. M.

His sister, who has rather a French accent that contrasts with his pronounced German one, told reporters yesterday that he was not at home, but might be around 6 P. M. Nevertheless he came from his apartment a few moments after she had made this statement.

At first he declared that he was not Mr. Lorenz, then finally admitted that he was Mr. Lorenz, and that there was a good romance behind his advertisement which he would tell when the advertisement had done its work. He said that to make the story public now would frustrate the advertisement's purpose, and that young men as well as young women might make application for the title. He said he supposed some consideration would be asked for it.

When it came to telling anything about his sudden change of residence—for he said he had lived on Long Island—and for his night working habit, he was silent. He hires his apartment only by the week, for $9, instead of by the month, as is the way apartments around there are usually rented.

J. BRUCE ISMAY HERE.

J. Bruce Ismay, President of the International Mercantile Marine Company, arrived yesterday on the White Star liner Oceanic. He announced that the Olympic and Titanic will be ready to go into commission in 1911. Mr. Ismay is here on a brief tour of inspection. He will sail from Canada on the steamship Megantic.

On the Oceanic came 800 second-class and steerage passengers who were on the Red Star liner Zeeland when she was in collision a week ago with the steamer Hartlepool off the English coast. The former put into Dover, and her passengers were transferred to other steamships.

The will of Harris Solomon of 127 East Seventy-second Street, filed for probate yesterday, gives $30,000 absolutely to his widow, Rachel Solomon. A trust fund of $20,000 is formed for the benefit of his daughter, Eugenie, one-half of the principal to be paid her in the event of her marriage, providing she wed in the Jewish faith; otherwise the trust is to be dissolved.

A trust similar in amount and conditions is directed to be made for his sons, Sidney H. and Walter Solomon. The residue goes to the wife. The accompanying petition gave the value of the estate at $10,000 real and "more than $10,000" personal property.

Dr. Eliot's "Best Books" In The Sunday Times

Beginning with next Sunday The New York Times will publish in its Sunday editions, in condensed form, the books which Dr. Eliot, President Emeritus of Harvard, has selected, after many months of study and elimination, as constituting a "five-foot library," containing all the essentials of a liberal education. "The Autobiography of Benjamin Franklin," which is first on Dr. Eliot's list, will be published, in attractive and readable condensation, next Sunday. Other selections by Dr. Eliot will be published in similar form from week to week thereafter.

The Picture Section of The Times next Sunday will contain what is in some respects the most remarkable photograph ever taken. The photograph shows most plainly the cyclones that rage in the Sun. The photograph, taken at the Mt. Wilson Observatory in California, has recently been exhibited before scientific bodies in Europe, and it has made a great sensation. It has added much more to the knowledge of the Sun than was known before. The photograph will have its first publication in The Sunday Times. A full page will be given to its reproduction, and all the features of the photograph will be clearly shown. There will be many other striking pages in next Sunday's Picture Section.

JOHN J. JENNINGS DEAD.

John J. Jennings, for seventeen years editor of the magazine section of The Evening World, died at his home, 617 West 118th Street, yesterday. He was 56 years old and leaves a widow.

Mr. Jennings was born in St. Louis and was graduated from the Christian Brothers' College there in 1875. He began newspaper work on the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. Later, as its dramatic editor, he became acquainted with many of the leading actors and managers of this country, among them Charles Frohman, who has been his intimate friend for years.

He became associated with The World in 1887, but in the following year returned to St. Louis as managing editor of The Post-Dispatch. In 1890 he came to this city and was on the editorial staff of The World for two years previous to his becoming editor of the magazine section of The Evening World.

Mr. Jennings wrote several books, among them "Theatrical and Circus Life," and rewrote many of the successful plays of the present day. He was a student of Shakespeare and effectually exploded the cryptogram theory in an exposure of the Ignatius Donnelly-Bacon-Shakespeare cipher. He was the author of the "Widow Magoogin" sketches, which appeared weekly in many newspapers from 1880 to 1895.

Mr. Jennings became ill in Paris last Winter and had a serious fall on the steamer bringing him to this country. He recovered somewhat, but on April 30 was again taken ill. He had planned a trip to Ireland next month, as his condition had slightly improved, but on Thursday last he suffered a severe chill and relapsed into unconsciousness, which ended in death.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Trading was much less active on the Stock Exchange yesterday, and the movement of prices was the opposite of that of Tuesday, but much more limited in extent. Some further advances were recorded in the early trading, but profit-taking sales, induced seemingly by the technical position of the market rather than by any development of the day, brought about a reaction, which gained some headway as the day advanced, and was still in progress when the market closed for the day. The changes were for the most part fractional, but they were almost uniformly on the side of net losses. United States Steel remained the most active issue, and its loss for the day, amounting to five-eighths of a point in the common stock, was relatively small if viewed in the light of the extent of the previous day's advance in the stock. The unsettled tone of the stock market yesterday was not to be attributed to the news of the day, which contained not a little that might be regarded as of favorable import for the market. There were excellent earning statements published, and several plans in which the stock market has been much interested were brought to fruition, including the formation of the Lackawanna's coal company and the strengthening of the Erie Railroad board by the election of four new Directors. The money market remained decidedly easy, despite the fact that yesterday was the last day for the preparation for the July 1 disbursements, which reach a large total. Call money at no time during the day loaned above 2 per cent., and for some time loan period offerings were even freer than earlier in the week. The ease in the money market indeed, was emphasized by the fact that rates in no wise reflected either the July 1 preparations or the announcement from Washington of the recall of $25,000,000 additional of public deposits. This call will have to be met, of course, by the banks in other parts of the country, inasmuch as the Government's deposits in New York City banks are now almost at an irreducible minimum, amounting to less than $2,500,000, but at the same time, in pursuance of the usual course, it is likely that interior banks will draw upon their New York correspondents to meet this call, and a large proportion of the cash to be turned over to the Government will doubtless come from the vaults of the banks in this city. This recall of $25,000,000 by the Treasury is doubtless intended to strengthen its cash balance during the first month of the fiscal year, when payments are unusually heavy. The Government deficit for the fiscal year just closed approximates $92,000,000, which is very much better showing than was anticipated at the close of last year. The betterment, of course, is the result of the large increase in imports with a corresponding increase in revenues from import duties.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Public Selling on Rallies.

Commission houses reported yesterday that the public, instead of buying stocks just after they have had a good rally, has reversed its traditional method and has been steadily selling for several days back, every time the market lifted its head. Whether this practice is general would be difficult to say, but the experience of several large houses having an important outside following tends to substantiate the belief that a good deal of profit taking of this order has been going on. The testimony of most brokers is that for the last year or more outside buyers of stocks have been showing more discrimination in their market operations than ever before, apparently having learned something from former experiences and being imbued with a wholesome fear of being "landed" with stocks at the top. The average Wall Street man would undoubtedly be greatly surprised to learn of the discretion which has been exercised by people in the smaller cities and towns of the country far removed from the financial district in market operations. Occasionally some of these drop into a downtown brokerage office with which they have been doing business at long range and open the eyes of the manager by the amount of knowledge they display regarding the minutest details of railroad earnings, &c., as well as of conditions obtaining in the market.

There was considerable selling of Steel yesterday by those who accepted as true Tuesday's rumors that the corporation itself would take a hand in the Paris listing negotiations, and act as sponsor for the application. This story, it was generally conceded, played no mean part in the sharp rise which occurred in the shares that day, and it was not until yesterday morning that the Street as a whole learned that the rumor was without foundation. The common stock fell ¾ per cent. in all, and the preferred 1½. The strike talk also led to some liquidation, but most traders did not consider that seriously.

No Response by Erie.

Erie proved a distinct disappointment to the bull following because of its failure to make a splurge in the market as a sort of celebration of the election of the four new Directors. The common stock at one time made a gain of one-half of 1 per cent., but closed, without net change. The first preferred maintained an improvement of one-eighth of 1 per cent., and the second preferred declined ¾. The action of the board had, of course, been so accurately foreshadowed that the formal announcement of the changes in the Directorate presented nothing essentially new, and, under the circumstances, the theory that the action had been discounted marketwise coincided with developments on the Exchange. Some, however, construed the movement of the stocks as indicating that the whole market was getting tired and badly in need of a fresh stimulant. They argued that if a really aggressive bull party still existed, advantage would have been taken of this long-talked-of event to work up, at least, a moderate show of enthusiasm.

As to Possible Support.

"These fractional fluctuations on transactions in 100-share lots," remarked an experienced operator, "mean absolutely nothing, and the person who tries to draw inferences from them in one direction or the other is likely to be badly fooled. It would make no material difference to the big banking interests if the market sagged off a few points on this listless trading, but if some one began to sell in 5,000 and 10,000 share lots you would see a radical change in the situation immediately. There is no especial need of the 'big fellows' taking cognizance of this small fry selling, but if stocks began to be offered in big lots you would see the banking interests sending in their supporting orders mighty quickly." This appears to be characteristic of the views held by numerous traders, but there are some who still cling to the belief that possibly certain banking interests would just as soon buy stocks 5 or 10 points lower as at the present level.

THE EUROPEAN MARKETS.

LONDON, June 30.—Money temporarily was dear on the market to-day and discounts were easy.

Trading on the Stock Exchange showed much irregularity, with narrow dealings. Gilt-edged securities improved on prospects of cheaper money, but home rails were weak on fears of a strike in the coal trade. Interest in Kaffirs broadened and the leading mine shares were dearer on Paris buying, which also strengthened foreigners. The Canadian loan of $32,500,000, which is expected daily, is already quoted at a premium of ¼.

American securities opened firm, ⅛ to ½ higher, but reacted on rumors of labor troubles in the Steel trade. At noon the market was dull, unchanged to ⅝ under yesterday's New York closing. Prices hardened in the afternoon. New York bid up Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, and United States Steel, which caused a general improvement, but in the last few minutes the market eased.

Money, 1¾@2¼ per cent. Rate of discount in the open market for short bills, 1½@1 9-16 per cent.; for three months' bills, 1½@1 9-16 per cent.

PARIS, June 30.—Prices on the Bourse to-day were firm.

BERLIN, June 30.—Prices on the Boerse to-day, including American railroad shares, were firm.

BOSTON, June 30.—London quotations were somewhat lower this morning, but this had little effect on the Boston list. North Butte was steady at around 57, United States Smelting common regained its dividend, and the balance of the copper shares showed little change. The undertone held steady, with trading quiet until the close.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

PHILADELPHIA, June 30.—Price movements in the local market were rather mixed and trading was in a narrow compass. Lake Superior showed pronounced heaviness at the start and declined rapidly to a small fraction below 22, but support was offered at that level and it rallied slightly. United Gas Improvement, on the other hand, selling ex dividend of $1 a share, covered part of the payment. Philadelphia Electric was also in better demand, advancing ⅛ point on moderate buying. The traction shares were inactive, not a single share of Rapid Transit being sold in the first three hours and only 200 Union Traction, the latter being down slightly. The Rapid Transit Company to-day filed its answer to the two equity suits filed by the Committee of Fifteen and the City Solicitor against it in the Common Pleas Court on the fare question. The market closed steady.

Subscriptions already received exceed $9,000,000.

Subscriptions will close at 3 p. m. Thursday, July 8, 1909, or earlier. All subscriptions should be accompanied by deposit of $50 per $1,000 bonds. The balance to be paid July 15th, 1909. No interest will be allowed on such deposit.

If no allotment be made, the deposit will be returned in full, and if only a portion of the amount applied for be allotted, the balance of the deposit will be appropriated toward the amount due on allotment.

"July 1, 1909.

"The $12,500,000 of first mortgage 4½ % gold bonds of this company sold you are part of an authorized issue of $25,000,000, the remainder of the bonds, however, can only be issued to an amount equal to seventy-five per cent. of the cost of new improvements or additional property coming under this mortgage, and in case such additional bonds are issued the sinking fund, hereinafter referred to, will be proportionately increased.

"The bonds are to be secured by a first mortgage of the real estate, plants, and fixed property of the company at Chicago, East St. Louis, St. Joseph and Kansas City, and the company covenants that in addition to the property mortgaged it will not incumber by way of any lien during the life of these bonds its distributing stations, consisting of real estate and buildings, at over one hundred points; and its railroad cars, the cost of which is approximately $2,000,000.

Under the terms of the trust deed a yearly sinking fund is provided sufficient to retire $200,000 of the bonds in each and every year, and in case of additional bonds being issued under the mortgage the sinking fund shall be proportionately increased.

"The Company also obligates itself that its net quick assets will always be equal to or in excess of the amount of its outstanding bonds, and the company covenants it will pay dividends only from the earnings of the present and succeeding fiscal year.

This business has been in successful operation for thirty years and dividends have been regularly paid to its owners or shareholders. The property of the company is carried on its books at $41,280,844.68, which on account of its policy of returning to the property yearly large sums for additions and betterments and not increasing the value of its real estate, some of which was bought many years ago, represents a very conservative and inadequate measure of its value to-day.

The average yearly earnings of the company for the last eight years have been in excess of four and one-half times the interest on these bonds and for the last four years have averaged over five times such interest.

"The proceeds of the present issue of bonds will be used to retire outstanding debts of the company.

The quick assets of the Company as of May 29th, 1909, consisting of packing house products, supplies, accounts receivable and cash, after deducting current accounts payable, were $21,835,570.53, against which the present issue of $12,500,000 would be the only debt.

"Pending the engraving of the definitive bonds, interim certificates of Messrs. Morris and Company, will be delivered, which certificates will be exchanged for the engraved bonds, when the same are ready for delivery, and will be secured by the deposit of the proceeds of the bonds with the First Trust and Savings Bank, Chicago, Ill., which is to be trustee under the mortgage, pending the creation of the mortgage, and the delivery of temporary or permanent bonds to the trustee.

"Application will be made for the listing upon the New York and Chicago Stock Exchanges of the $12,500,000 of bonds sold you."

OUTSIDE SECURITIES

CHICAGO SUBWAY WEAK

Makes New Low Record for the Year, but Recovers the Greater Part of the Decline—Coppers Move Sluggishly.

The Curb market was an indifferent affair yesterday with small price changes outside of one or two issues and limited activity. Chicago Subway attracted some attention, selling down to 20½, a new low record for the year, from the opening level of 22. The close, after transactions of 700 shares, was at 21⅞. Atlantic, Gulf & West Indies preferred made a spurt upward, rising from 24 ¾ to 27¼ on transactions of 625. In the mining list trading was sluggish and price movements were without any definite trend in either direction. Boston Copper, Cumberland-Ely, Nevada Consolidated, and United Copper made advances of small fractions.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Through the transfer yesterday of the old Alston apartment house, on the northwest corner of Thirty-eighth Street and Madison Avenue, by the Madison Avenue and Thirty-eighth Street Company to the 250 Madison Avenue Company, it was learned that the Murray Hill section of Madison Avenue, which hitherto has consisted of only the finest residential buildings, is to have its first office building. A twenty-story loft and office building is to be erected upon the site, and plans are now being prepared for it by Buchman & Fox, architects.

The property, the sale of which to Frederick Johnson, owner of the 250 Madison Avenue Company, was reported in these columns recently, was to have been converted into a new ten-story apartment house, the Madison Avenue and Thirty-eighth Street Company, of which W. H. Chesebrough is President, to participate in the financing. Since then Mr. Johnson has changed his intention, and it was arranged that the Madison Avenue and Thirty-eighth Street Company sell the entire property to him.

Excepting the Cameron Building, at Thirty-fourth Street and Madison Avenue, which does not front on the avenue, this will be the first business structure to encroach on the residential part of Madison Avenue. Less than two blocks south, at Thirty-sixth Street, is the J. P. Morgan residence, while within the radius of half a block are the residences of Charles Scribner, Frederick Havemeyer, Edward Sheldon, Mrs. A. A. Anderson, and others prominent in society.

But Joseph Broke the Pledge—Breach Healed Over His Coffin in a Stall —Sister the Treasurer.

The history of a strange family, how they have lived as ragpickers and accumulated a fortune amounting to at least $60,000, how one of them lived in a stable and was buried from there, was brought out yesterday by the probating of the will of Joseph Monaghan of Maspeth, L. I., by John T. Robinson, an attorney of Elmhurst.

The family, which now consists of two brothers and a sister, another sister having died, met on Wednesday for the first time in several years in the stable where Joseph's funeral was held. Nearly 700 people surrounded the stable at the time, for the Monaghans and their eccentricities are well known in the community.

The coffin reposed in one of the stalls and candles were placed on the partitions. There were even flowers distributed around the stable. In this queer situation the two remaining brothers and the one sister clasped hands and effected a reconciliation, which was the closing incident in a quarrel which had lasted several years.

It was nearly fifty years ago that Patrick Monaghan came to America from Ireland and settled in lower Manhattan. He brought his wife and three children, Patrick, Jr., John, and Alice. Afterward there were born to him a daughter and a son, Margaret and Joseph. After living in this country for a decade the father died. The children at that time gathered around his coffin and formed a strange compact. They agreed always to live together, always to work together, and never to marry. Alice, the eldest child, was to have charge of the money.

About twenty years ago the family moved to Maspeth in the Newtown section of Queens County. The mother died soon after. The vocation of the Monaghans was ragpicking and scavenging. They worked hard and faithfully, and all the money thus made was turned over to Alice. Much of the income she invested in real estate.

It was not long after the family moved to Maspeth that the first break came. Joseph decided to get married. He moved away from his brothers and sisters after he had taken this step, but, although he had displeased his brothers and sisters he did not succeed in pleasing his wife, because he insisted on continuing to turn over most of his income to Alice.

In the end the two found it impossible to live together and they separated. Mrs. Joseph Monaghan and the child, Rosie, live at 2,016 Second Avenue, Manhattan.

When Joseph left his wife he and his brother Patrick went to live in the stable of a house they owned. They rented the house. Patrick owned several horses, which had to be kept somewhere, and the brothers slept in a stall between them. Here it was that Joseph died.

About five years ago there was trouble again in the family, this time over money. The case was taken into court and Alice was compelled to divide the estate so that each one got his share. Margaret died soon after this, and she felt so unfriendly toward Alice that she left her only $5. She thought that the law compelled her to leave her sister something. The rest of her estate she divided in her will between her three brothers.

Since then the family has been separated. Alice, now 62 years old, has lived alone; Patrick, 60 years old, has lived in the stable with Joseph, while John has lived in one room of a house that he owns. Patrick is nearly blind, but he continues to do a great deal of work. Joseph had been unlucky with his money, and in the end was worth less than the others. He leaves only about $2,000, of which $500 goes to his widow and the rest to his brother Patrick.

The will was filed in the Queens County Surrogate's Court and the question of admitting it to probate will come up on July 13.

"It is impossible to tell the value of the property until the parties appear in court," said John T. Robinson, the attorney who filed the will. "But the value of the combined estate is undoubtedly quite a sum." Mr. Robinson also filed Margaret's will.

Ex-Judge George Burr of Maspeth has long taken a friendly interest in the family, and he is the executor of the will. The wife, it is said, is satisfied with her share of $500.

MAY NOW DIVORCE MRS. HUNT.

Aged Husband Whom She Left in Paris First Said He Wouldn't.

John Wright Hunt, the wealthy hotel builder and owner, whose wife left him in a Paris hotel to elope with a Russian whom she met while traveling, sailed for Liverpool yesterday on the Cunard liner Lusitania. Mr. Hunt returned from abroad three weeks ago without his wife.

At that time he told the story of his wife's elopement and declared that he would never divorce her. He said on sailing yesterday that he would not try to effect a reconciliation with his wife, but he did not appear to be so certain about the divorce. He said he was going over to get his automobiles and perhaps make a trip through Europe.

Mr. Hunt is about 68 years old and his wife is about 25. The elopement marked the end of an automobile tour the pair made. They were stopping at a hotel in Paris when Mrs. Hunt met a young Russian in the hotel corridor. Within two weeks after their meeting she had left her aged husband for the younger man.

AGAINST ROOSEVELT ESTATE.

Judge Martin, in the United States Circuit Court, decided yesterday that the only compensation the estate of Robert B. Roosevelt, an uncle of, ex-President Roosevelt, is entitled to in connection with the sale of the premises, 33 Nassau Street, by the Holland Building Association to the Holland Trust Company, is the return of the Brigantine Island securities which were put up by Mr. Roosevelt at the time of the deal in March, 1901.

Brigantine Island is off the New Jersey Coast. It was taken over by the Holland Trust Company, Robert B. Roosevelt, and other capitalists, with the intention of making it a rival resort to Atlantic City. The venture proved a failure, and the securities are now said to be practically worthless.

Falls Dead in Front of New Home.

Jacob Entemann, a well-to-do retired butcher, 60 years old, fell dead yesterday in front of his home at Tremont and Castle Hill Avenues, Westchester, of heart disease. Two years ago he retired with a fortune and bought a home in South Norwalk, Conn., where he went to live with his wife and five children. Recently he became weary of idleness and purchased the Westchester house, intending to resume business where he made his fortune.

SEA GAMBLERS' LONELY TRIP.

Three on the Caronia Forced to Play Checkers and Chess.

The men were recognized by the steward and officers as soon as they came aboard, and in addition to the usual notice warning passengers from playing cards with strangers, Capt. Dow posted another notice warning the passengers that it was known that gamblers were on the steamship.

Stewards were also cautioned to keep a watch over the men. In consequence the suspected trio did not play any games more serious than checkers and chess.

The coming of the gamblers has revived the often-denied story that the steamship lines intend to establish private rogues' galleries to protect their patrons from professional sea-going card sharps.

RAILWAYS' ALBANY EXPENSES.

ALBANY, June 30.—The Erie Railroad Company to-day certified to the Secretary of State that it spent $1,100 at the session of the last Legislature. The money was paid to Reynolds, Stanchfield & Collin, attorneys for the company.

The Coney Island & Brooklyn Railroad Company certified it spent $2,669. Dykman, Oelund & Kuhn of Brooklyn received most of the money.

Board Allowed No Discrimination Between French and German Goods.

The Board of United States General Appraisers has denied claims filed by Horstmann, Von Hein & Co., D. S. Hesse & Bro., and Aitken, Son & Co., and others regarding the classification of narrow woven fabrics of silks claimed by the importers to be entitled to enter this country at the rate of 50 per cent., either as manufactures of silk or as silk beltings at the same rate.

Collector Loeb classified the merchandise as "silk trimmings or galloons," with a customs tax of 60 per cent. It appears that the articles have superimposed ornamentation of a different color from the ground fabric worked thereon, while other of the articles have scalloped elges. On the other hand, the importers desired the board to distinguish between articles of the kind here in question shipped from Germany and similar goods shipped from France. The former are known as the "Barmen" variety, and the latter as the "St. Etienne."

General Appraiser Fischer says in overruling the protests:

"The importers' contention really amounts only to a claim that the manufactures of one country should be differentiated from another. On the record and testimony in these cases we find nothing to warrant a departure from our previous rulings. The protests are overruled and the decisions of the collector affirmed."

FOUR NEW ERIE DIRECTORS.

Gary, Perkins, Loree, and Lovett Represent Morgan and Harriman Interests

Four new Directors were elected to the board of the Erie Railroad yesterday. They are E. H. Gary, George W. Perkins, L. F. Loree, and R. S. Lovett. The first two represent the Morgan interests, while Mr. Loree and Judge Lovett are associated with the Harriman interests, Mr. Loree being President of the Delaware & Hudson and Judge Lovett Vice President and general counsel of the Union Pacific.

There was one vacancy on the board and three other places were created by the resignation of Alexander E. Orr, William C. Lane, and Louis L. Stanton.

In addition to electing these Directors the Erie Railroad board took occasion yesterday to set at rest the rumors which have cropped up from time to time that President F. D. Underwood was about to leave the Erie. They authorized a formal denial of these rumors. Both these steps were undertaken, it is understood, with the same object, namely, that of solidifying the management of the Erie Railroad and strengthening it, with a view to making most out of the company's opportunities.

With the purchase of the road's coupons which fall due to-day by J. P. Morgan & Co. the emergency measures adopted last year will be brought to a close, and from this time on it is expected that the Erie will manage its finances in the usual way. The earnings for May, made public yesterday, showed an increase of $449,000 in gross and an increase of $180,000 in operating income. For the eleven months of the fiscal year the operating income amounts to $12,290,000, an increase of more than $4,000,000 over the corresponding period last year.

Several promotions of officials in the transportation and traffic departments of the Erie were announced yesterday, among them being the appointment of John B. Dickson to the position of Superintendent of the Rochester Division. He has been assistant to the General Manager.

MERCANTILE MARINE SHOWS 1908 DEFICIT

President Ismay Says, However, That There Has Been a Recovery This Year.

HARD HIT BY DEPRESSION

Costly Privilege of Carrying the American Flag Results in Transfer of Three Ships to Belgian Flag.

The annual report of the International Mercantile Marine for the year ended December, 1908, the sixth year of its organization, shows a deficit of $1,729,982 after meeting all fixed charges, operating expenses, maintenance, &c. This compares with a surplus of $4,033,730 in 1907. President J. Bruce Ismay, in his report to the stockholders, explains the deficit as chiefly due to the business depression here and abroad which cut down westbound freights heavily in the first half of 1908, reducing the tonnage below that for the same period for a number of years and making it necessary for a number of the lines to lay up several steamers, especially those built for carrying freight only. East-bound freight was reduced to a lesser degree. The passenger business was likewise affected and the number carried of all classes was reduced by 950,788 persons.

Speaking of present conditions and the outlook, President Ismay says:

> The actual results so far this year indicate that the trade conditions during 1909 will be better than those which existed during 1908, and the management is hopeful that the result of the working for the present year will show some improvement on that for 1908, but until commercial conditions in the United States become normal and improve in other countries anything like satisfactory earnings cannot be expected. However, with the improvements and additions to your fleets, under anything like fair conditions you can confidently look for a material improvement in results.

The costly privilege of flying the American flag which E. H. Harriman complained of in reference to the shipping situation on the Pacific before his departure to Europe, is reflected in the action of the International Mercantile Marine in transferring some of its steamers to Belgian register. On this point the report says:

> Owing to the additional cost and complications of operating the steamships Finland, Kroonland, and Samland under the American flag, without any compensating advantages, as compared with their sister ships in the Antwerp service operating under a foreign flag, these steamers have been transferred to the Belgian register and flag.

Gross voyage earnings for the year were $29,981,044, and miscellaneous earnings, including dividends on outside investments, $576,023. Voyage expenses totaled $24,551,111, and other expenses brought the total up to $29,653,891, leaving net earnings at $908,176. Interest and taxes amounted to $3,651,130, and interest on advances for steamship construction to $44,372, which put the deficit at $2,792,326. This was reduced by the surplus insurance amount item of $1,062,344 to $1,729,982.

IRON AND STEEL NOTES.

> The iron and steel markets are showing numerous evidences of strength. Not only are prices advancing on both pig iron and rolled products, but manufacturers are becoming more independent. That they can again discriminate in their favors to buyers is shown by the manner in which in numerous lines the acceptance of orders at present prices is limited to specifications for early delivery.
>
> Agricultural implement makers find the demand exceeding their estimates. It seems certain that they will have to make additional purchases of bars and shapes.

The Iron Trade Review says:

> Even the intense heat of the last few days has not checked the activity of mills and furnaces, and the first half of the year closes with most satisfactory conditions. While one cannot speak with absolute assurance concerning the last half of this year and the first half of next until crop prospects are more definitely defined, crops are now in good condition, and if the progress continues great prosperity for the iron business seems to be assured. The only cloud in the sky is due to labor troubles, but the strike on the Great Lakes against the open-shop principle is rapidly collapsing, and it is likely that the same result will follow the strike which has just been declared against the open-shop principle in sheet and tin plate mills.
>
> From all parts of the country comes most encouraging news concerning the plans for buying of railroad equipment. One large system expects to destroy many of its old cars and to bring its entire equipment up to a much higher standard of excellence. The Harriman lines have purchased 5,200 cars. The Alabama Great Northern awarded the contract for 500 cars to the Standard Steel Car Company, and 250 to the Pressed Steel Car Company; the C., B. & Q. is in the market for 500 freight cars; the Ann Arbor Railroad has ordered 1,400 tons of structural steel, and is reported in the market for 12,000 tons additional; the Santa Fe has ordered 10,000 tons of its tie plates; the C. & E. W. has ordered 720 tons of bridge material, and the Interborough Transit Company of New York has closed for 150 steel Subway and 100 steel elevated coaches. The rail situation continues to improve.

Not Later Than Noon To-morrow

Men and women over fifty years of age who are seeking employment may advertise free of charge in next Sunday's issue of The New York Times. But the advertisements must be sent in before noon to-morrow.

Much depends on the way in which the advertisement is written. Tell the business world just what you have done and what you know you can do. Tell it in as few words as possible, though as a matter of fact as many as fifty words are permissible.

Answers to last Sunday's advertisements are still being received. There is little doubt that the new way of advertising the particular work you want is far superior to the old way of personal interviews and tiresome rounds of the business district.

Advertisements will be received at the Main Office, Times Building, Times Square at the Wall Street Office, 80 Broadway, or at the Downtown Office, 8 Spruce Street. Advertisements must be indorsed with the name and address of the advertiser, not necessarily for publication, but as a matter of good faith. But get the advertisements in

SAYS DEAD ARTIST'S SPIRIT OBSESSES HIM

HEARS A STRANGE VOICE

Strains of Weird Music, Too, Come to Him as He Visits Scenes Familiar to the Artist.

In a long report published in the current number of The Journal of the American Society for Psychical Research Prof. James H. Hyslop, President of the society, gives an account of the obsession of Frederic L. Thompson, a goldsmith, by the spirit of Robert Swain Gifford, an artist. Mr. Thompson has been obliged to give up his own trade and devote himself to painting the same scenes as the dead artist, and on different occasions has heard words which seemed to proceed from the artist's spirit and the music it loved, though no one was near to produce it.

According to Prof. Hyslop, Mr. Thompson's acquaintance with Mr. Gifford was only slight, and he knew practically nothing of art outside of his own trade. He did not even know at the time the desire to paint first seized him that Mr. Gifford was dead. Some years ago he met the artist on the marshes about New Bedford, Mass., and talked to him for a little time, and once he saw him painting in the distance. Once also in New York he called on the painter in the course of business and showed him some jewelry.

In the Summer of 1905 Mr. Thompson was first seized with the desire to paint in oils. As he gave way to the impulse he lost his interest in his own line of work and showed unexpected skill as an artist. As he worked he felt that he was Mr. Gifford, and remarked to his wife, "Gifford wants to sketch," but it was not till six months later as he saw the notice of an exhibition in the American Art Galleries of the work of "the late Robert Swain Gifford" that he discovered that the artist had died about six months before he first felt driven to the brush.

As Mr. Thompson went through the Gifford exhibition he seemed to hear, according to Prof. Hysiop, a voice saying: "You see what I have done. Can you not take up and finish my work?" From this time on the impulse to paint was stronger than ever, and by the following year he had produced several paintings of sufficient merit to command a fair price. One of his patron was James B. Townsend, who remarked as he examined the picture that it resembled those of Mr. Gifford.

Mr. Thompson came to Prof. Hyslop in January, 1907, as he feared that his mind was giving way through the strength of the obsession, and Prof. Hyslop gives details of his visits to mediums, who had no idea who he was. In the following Summer he handed to Prof. Hyslop some sketches which he had made in the Summer and Fall of 1905. Prof. Hyslop locked them up.

Then Mr. Thompson went to the Summer home of Mr. Gifford, at Nonquitt, Mass., which he said he had never visited before. His object was to discover certain scenes which had appeared to him repeatedly in his visions. While he was there Mrs. Gifford took him into the studio of the dead artist.

"To his surprise," says Prof. Hyslop, "he saw on the easel an unfinished sketch which was absolutely identical with one of the sketches which he had left in my hands more than a month before. He said in his diary it almost took his breath away to see the identity between this painting and his visions and sketches. There were two other pictures on easels which were identical with sketches he had made but had not been left with me."

Mrs. Gifford bore witness that to make this coincidence the more striking the picture had been rolled up and put away till after Mr. Gifford's death, so that Mr. Thompson had no opportunity to see it, and that it was six months after Mr. Gifford's death before the impulse seized him to try to paint it.

Mr. Thompson pursued his search for the places he saw in his visions, and discovered that Mr. Gifford has been particularly fond of an island which is private property and only visited after a permit has been obtained. On this island Mr. Thompson came across a peculiar group of trees, which had become familiar to him through his visions.

"He stumbled upon them," writes Prof. Hyslop, "in his wanderings about this island and started to sketch them, when he heard a voice similar to the one he had heard at the art gallery, which said, 'Go and look on the other side of the tree.' Though some sixty feet away, he went forward, and on the opposite side of the tree he found the initials of Mr. Gifford carved in the bark of a beach tree in 1902."

Other cases of identity between sketches made after his visions and the actual scenes he found are mentioned by Prof. Hyslop. "There was one of a forest rather dense which Mr. Thompson sketched from a hallucination and then found the original on another easel, though he did not recognize it at the time, having forgotten that he had sketched it. There were also two sketches of a seashore and a man with an ox team, and on still another easel in Mr. Gifford's studio was a painting of Mr. Gifford's representing the same scenes."

Mr. Thompson had other interesting experiences on this island, which he set down at the time in his diary. He often heard music like that of a violin or a guitar, says Prof. Hyslop, and tended to see if he could find who the performer was. But there appeared to be no one there except two or three families of caretakers.

The music was heard in different places and at different times, "and once," says Prof. Hyslop, "Mr. Thompson ran up a hill to see if he could find some one whom he fancied he heard singing, but found no one, and he had several miles of view before him that was clear. Usually the music that he heard was instrumental. A friend of Mr. Gifford states that Mr. Gifford was passionately fond of music, especially of the violin. Whether there is anything more than a coincidence in this must be determined by each one for himself."

FROTHINGHAM DIED POOR.

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, June 30.—The late Howard P. Frothingham, the well-known New York loan broker and member of the Stock Exchange, who was for many years President of the New Jersey Fish and Game Commission, and at one time was a millionaire, died leaving an estate which will yield less than $10,000. This was the statement made by Attorney General Edmund Wilson before the Court of Errors and Appeals yesterday afternoon. Mr. Wilson appeared as counsel for Mrs. Frothingham in the appeal from the decision of Vice Chancellor Walker in the prerogative court over the construction of Mr. Frothingham's will.

About a month before he died, Mr. Frothingham decided to change his will with the evident intention of leaving whatever might be left of his estate to his wife. He consulted with James P. Dodd, a confidential clerk in his office, and together the two went over the original will. Mr. Frothingham indicated a number of changes which he wished made, some of which were shown by lead pencil marks made by him, and others by similar marks made at his suggestion by Mr. Dodd. The substantial effect of these changes was to cancel certain legacies which could not have been made from the depleted estate, and to strike out bequests of properties with which Mr. Frothingham had parted during his days of adversity. Before the will could be put into shape for execution, Mr. Frothingham died.

NEW LACKAWANNA COAL CO.

Concern with $6,800,000 Capital Will Handle Output of Road's Mines.

The Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad organized in New Jersey yesterday the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Coal Company with a capital of $6,800,000, divided into shares of the par value of $50. This is the first formal step in the segregation of the Lackawanna's coal business from its railroad business in compliance with the requirements of the commodities clause of the Hepburn law as recently interpreted by the Supreme Court.

Circulars will be issued to the Lackawanna stockholders to-day informing them of the organization of this coal company and announcing the details of the company's plan for the future management of its coal business and of the disposition to be made of the stock of the new company. The incorporators are Percy R. Pyne of Princeton and Edward E. Loomis and William S. Fahrenstock of Hoboken.

The plan is so devised that the coal business which has been owned by the Lackawanna stockholders through the stock of the railroad company will now be owned indirectly through the stock of the coal company, by which means the business of handling coal will be separated from the railroad business. The new company, it is understood, will not mine coal itself, but will buy the coal-handling plants now owned by the railroad and will contract with the railroad to purchase the output of its coal mines, probably in perpetuity. Thus, while title to the coal mines themselves will still rest with the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western, the handling of the coal, once it is mined, will be done by the coal company.

The capitalization of the coal company amounts to a little more than 25 per cent. of the capital of the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western. It has been understood that the Lackawanna plans a cash dividend in connection with the formation of the new company. This dividend may be larger than the amount needed to cover the capital of the new company, in which event the stockholders will be receiving some share in the company's large surplus in addition to the amount represented by the par value of the new coal company's stock.

The capitalization of the new company, which has been placed at $6,800,000, covers, it is understood, the value of the mined coal now held by the Lackawanna and the value of the coal handling plants, not including, of course, the coal mines themselves. The Lackawanna's profits from its coal business, apart from its profits as a transportation company, are very large. The coal department's earnings amounted in 1908 to $4,166,792, in 1907 to $4,224,920, and in 1906 to $3,655,119.

The charter of the new company is broad in character. In addition to mining and selling its own coal the company is permitted to own stock in other coal companies and engage in the purchase and sale of other commodities. It was stated in well-informed quarters here yesterday that the officers of the new company will be men not now officially connected with the Lackawanna Railroad.

DENIES COAL ROAD COMPACT.

E. B. Thomas, President of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, was the principal witness yesterday at the hearing of the Government's suit against the coal-carrying railroads, held at the Astor House. Mr. Thomas denied that there was any agreement between the coal-carrying roads to limit the output of coal or fix prices. Asked for a reason why the railroads purchased coal lands, Mr. Thomas said it was for the purpose of retaining the tonnage, which otherwise might go to a competitor.

He threw an interesting sidelight on the purchase by the Erie Railroad, which he was then connected with, of the Pennsylvania Coal Company. Mr. Thomas said he knew that the Pennsylvania Railroad wanted part of the tonnage of that company, which he thought really belonged to the Erie.

"When the opportunity offered," said Mr. Thomas, "I went about it quietly, without the knowledge of a single competitor, for fear that some other road might forestall me. J. P. Morgan & Co. bought the coal company and transferred it to the Erie, and I think this purchase was the best the Erie ever made, for it makes it solvent to-day."

Pressed about an alleged agreement covering the price of coal, Mr. Thomas said no such agreement existed. "We can't afford to sell coal lower than now," he said, "but if commercial reasons require it I can make a reduction at any time without notifying anybody."

ELECTRIC VEHICLE PLAN OUT.

Sharp Reduction in Capitalization and Common Share Assessment.

Details of the plan of reorganization of the Electric Vehicle Company, which has been dragging along in a receiver's hands since 1907, were current in Wall Street yesterday, although the plan has not yet been published. As has been predicted, the common stockholders of this $20,000,000 concern will have to pay $1 per share for the privilege of exchanging twenty shares of their old stock for one share of the stock of the reorganized company.

During 1899, when the Electric Storage Battery Company, a concern controlled by New York traction interests, bought a large block of the stock, the common stock sold as high as 140 per share, and the public bought heavily. At that time the preferred stock was paying 2 per cent. dividends quarterly and the common paid 8 per cent. in that year. No dividends have been paid since. The preferred paid its last dividend of 2 per cent. in April, 1900.

The preferred shares under the reorganization plan are entitled to new stock at the rate of twenty of the old for one share of the new common stock without the necessity of paying a one-dollar per share assessment. The new company is capitalized at $2,000,000 preferred stock, compared with $9,000,000 preferred in the old company, and $7,000,000 common stock, against $11,000,000 in the old company. The holders of the company's $1,521,000 bonds are to be given $620 in new preferred stock for every one-thousand-dollar bond.

Small Failure on Little Board.

The suspension of James F. Harris, a floor trader on the Consolidated Stock Exchange, was announced yesterday. He was caught short, it was said, of United States Steel and a few other stocks in Tuesday's rise in the market and was unable yesterday to meet his obligations on the Exchange.

GOLDMAN CHAMPIONS WIN THE EAST SIDE

VERY ORDERLY ANARCHISTS

L. D. Abbott Opens the Meeting—Miss de Cleyre Talks Vigorously—Emma Goldman Not Present.

Spotless Town has been located. It is in East Orange, N. J. Alden Freeman says so, and he lives there and ought to know.

Alden Freeman is the Mayflower descendant who got roasted out of a genealogical society or two for inviting Emma Goldman, the Anarchist, to partake of a few mayflowers in East Orange, N. J., on the occasion of some grand celebration or other. He also wrote a letter to Mayor McClellan complaining that the police had made him ill by chasing him and several hundred other American citizens into the street when they had paid good American money to hear Miss Goldman lecture on that incendiary topic, "The Drama."

Last night the most rigidly law-abiding people in the City of New York—we refer, of course, to the Anarchists—got together in Cooper Union to express their indignation over the action of the police in suppressing Emma Goldman every time she tries to talk, and they let Alden Freeman, a Puritan unto the third and fourth generation, preside over them.

It was a funny crowd, viewed from our New York standpoint. Now, normally, you would suppose that a lot of Anarchists would be the most uncontrollable and lawless outfit you could get together. Actually these Anarchists gave any Presbyterian prayer meeting cards and spades on courtesy and decency. If a man tried to get out of there before the meeting was over he sneaked out; he concealed himself; he tried to avoid observation.

It was entirely different from the average Republican or Democratic mass meeting, where as soon as the star speaker has got through everybody rises and makes a sprint for the doorway. And if anybody tried to applaud at the wrong time he was hissed down.

The fuss was over the fact that some time ago, when Emma Goldman went to Harlem and tried to tell an audience that Ibsen had Hauptmann beaten as a dramatist and that Eugene Walter was the hope of the American stage, a lot of policeman chased her off the stage on the theory that Hauptmann was probably an Anarchist because he was Dutch. This outrage had rankled in the minds of the Anarchists, and they had hired Cooper Union for $75 to show that they didn't like it.

Leonard D. Abbott opened the meeting. He is an editor—runs a magazine, in fact. When he got on the platform he confronted the most earnest crowd that has filled Cooper Union in many a day. At the outset they had a line of policemen stationed around the hall, presumably to arrest Emma Goldman if she should get up and erupt some incendiary sentiment such as "Eugene Walter is a great dramatist"—which is about as far as Emma Goldman goes these days.

But Leonard Abbott announced, 'right off the bat,' that Miss Goldman wasn't going to speak and wasn't even going to be there, because she would surely be arrested as soon as she opened her mouth, and the promoters of the meeting didn't care for any police interference.

But Leonard Abbott and everybody else who talked last night rubbed in the fact that Miss Goldman would make a speech at 100 West Sixteenth Street on Friday—count it; 100 West—near Lenox Avenue—take the Subway—you can't miss it.

After Mr. Abbott had got through Alden Freeman took the chair. If anybody has the idea that Alden Freeman is a "sissy" he should revise his opinion. He has got the lower jaw of a bulldog and the upper jaw of a philosopher. He looks like a cross between Herbert Spencer and Pete, President Roosevelt's bull terrier. There is a gleam of humor lurking all the time behind his earnestness, and he is the sort of man that a real man warms to.

If anybody has concluded that because Freeman has taken up Emma Goldman's cause he is a crank, that man is just as much mistaken as it is possible for a mere fallible human being to be, without divine or adventitious aid.

"Spotless Town," said J. Alden Freeman, referring to the fact that the East Orange police wouldn't let Emma Goldman talk about Eugene Walter in a public hall there for fear she might corrupt the town, "is located in East Orange, N. J. We have the most spotless police in the world. We have even got you New Yorkers beaten. For why? Our police can steal as much as your police can and still look innocent. Therefore, come to Spotless Town."

Most of the people this Mayflower descendant addressed were Russian Jews or east siders of some sort. Yet—and it was a curious thing—there was not a low-brow in the crowd. Freeman seemed to have skimmed off the cream of the east side to listen to him. Every man there was a potential doctor or lawyer. The brutal jaw and overhanging eyebrow were missing altogether. And here and there in the crowd you could see people that were not of the east side at all; persons obviously of a different environment and higher vestage—mostly women, these were. It was a curious juxtaposition of the east side crowd—the really better east side crowd—and the people from uptown.

Freeman's talk was largely along patriotic lines, to the effect that we had labored for liberty of speech, and had even incorporated it in our Constitution, and shouldn't part with that hard-won freedom because some police Captain wanted us to. After him come John S. Crosby, an old Henry George man, and ex-Congressman Anti-Pass Baker of Brooklyn, and a man named Ray from Wisconsin, introduced as a lieutenant of "Fighting Bob," who in private life is Senator La Follette.

But the real hit was made by Voltairine de Cleyre. Theoretically she is a woman, but so far as there is any alleged superiority of man over woman, Miss de Cleyre has got man backed to the boards, and is as much of a man as any and more than some. She has an oratorical voice that Daniel Webster would have been glad to buy for real money, and when she is expressing her opinion of the Government there is not a man in the United States Senate who would not be willing to exchange his salary for her secret of moving audiences. Which is not to say that she is a ranter, for she does not rant; she is simply a powerful and original speaker, as to whom nature made a great mistake in casting her for petticoats instead of trousers.

Whatever honors Miss de Cleyre of Philadelphia had left to be taken were grabbed by a lovely old lady named Mrs. Rathbun—the nice kind of motherly old lady you have always cherished in your dreams. She got up and told how the police had chased her away from Emma Goldman's meeting, and waved her gloved hands as she told it, until you wished you had been there to smite the low-browed policeman who dared to interfere with her.

And finally, Mr. Freeman put to vote certain resolutions denouncing the police force for interfering with Miss Goldman's meetings, and they were carried with a bank. There were only three policemen in the hall now. The rest had gone out as soon as it became quite certain that Miss Goldman would not say anything incendiary about Eugene Walter.

At a late hour Mr. Freeman was still reminding everybody that Miss Goldman was to speak at 100 West 116th Street on Friday. It is expected that there will be a good many policemen there, and if Miss Goldman goes too far on the Eugene Walter issue there may be an arrest.

Come one, come all.

Alderman T. P. Sullivan, Bridge Commissioner Stevenson, and Controller Metz revived their dispute over the immediate removal of the buildings on the east side of the Bowery, between Bayard and Canal Streets, on the property to be covered by the Manhattan terminal of the new Manhattan Bridge at the meeting of the Sinking Fund Commission yesterday, and "Little Tim" made a few remarks which caused every one present, including the Mayor, to wonder what was coming next.

The question of the delay in razing the buildings has been taken up by the Citizens' Union, it being pointed out that they were left standing as there are several lodging houses which are the registration homes of many voters at election time.

In the argument yesterday, before the commission voted unanimously to place the matter at the discretion of the Controller, Mr. Sullivan rapped Commissioner Stevenson when the latter said in reply to a question from the Mayor that he did not know that there were any lodging houses on the property.

"Oh, come! There are and you know there are," snapped the Alderman. "And it is a good thing, too, for you that they are there. If they weren't you might be doing something else."

"My only desire," explained the Controller, "in presenting this resolution is to enable me to dispose of these buildings and have them removed when the time comes that necessitates it."

"My vote is not influenced by the Citizens' Union nor is my stand in this report," the Controller added. At a recent meeting of the commission the Controller contended that the buildings on the terminal site were bringing the city altogether too much rent to allow their being torn down at the present time.

"Well," continued Mr. Sullivan, undisturbed, "I must object to some things, and I don't think the Bridge Commissioner should have given out the statement that he did."

Mr. Stevenson was occupying a seat well in the back of the Council Chamber. At this juncture he arose and coming forward said: "I made no statement except what I said right here. I am not responsible for what the Citizens' Union says."

After adjournment, the Alderman refused to be more specific as to why "it is a good thing" that the lodging houses are where they are, but did not refrain from criticising Commissioner Stevenson.

"Everything he has done has been a failure," said he. "The Queensboro Bridge is 6,000,000 tons too heavy, and the condition of the Delancey Street approach to the Williamsburg Bridge is a disgrace."

The commission authorized the granting of free transportation on the municipal ferries to school children wishing to go to the Curtis Playgrounds on Staten Island.

VOLTAIRE'S WRITINGS UPHELD

Buyer Who Refused to Pay for Alleged Immoral Books Loses on Appeal.

Voltaire's works were the subject of a decision handed down yesterday by Justice Seabury, sitting in the Appellate Term of the Supreme Court. Peter J. Quinn signed a contract with the St. Hubert Guild to supply him with a set of Voltaire, for which he was to pay $200. At the time he signed the contract, Quinn says, he was assured that the books made very fine reading, and were fit for any one. Instead of this being the case, Quinn says that he found the books contained "reading of a character not fit to be read in his family."

Consequently, he refused to pay for them. The St. Hubert Guild brought suit in the Ninth District Municipal Court, which was decided in Quinn's favor. An appeal was taken, and in reversing the judgment, Justice Seabury, with the concurrence of Justices Gildersleeve and Giegerich, holds that it is no part of the duty of courts to exercise a censorship over literary productions.

Justice Seabury, in his decision, remarks that the judgment of the lower court is not the first occasion on which "The Philosophical Dictionary" has been condemned by the judiciary, the last occasion being, so far as he knew, in 1766, in France, when a youth in whose possession a copy of the work was found was publicly burned in the streets of Paris.

In holding that the contract was a valid one, Justice Seabury says, in conclusion:

> The object of the law which prohibits the sale or publication of immoral literature is to prevent the circulation of literature which is hurtful to the community. To apply this rule so as to prohibit the sale or publication of the works of Voltaire would not give effect to its purpose. Differ as men may as to the views of Voltaire on many questions, none can deny the great influence of his work in promoting justice and humanity and the reign of reason in public affairs.

A new trial was ordered.

"KIDNAPPER" WAS A GIRL.

Mrs. Anna Lane of 3,533 Third Avenue, left her three months' old infant in a go-cart outside of a store at 153d Street and Third Avenue, the Bronx, yesterday afternoon, while she entered to make some purchases. Presently she glanced outside, and, not seeing the go-cart, ran into the street crying out that some one had stolen her child.

Capt. Tappen of the Morrisania Police Station, when notified, sent out all of his reserves to look for the child and for a tramp about 30 years old. A boy in the neighborhood said he had seen the tramp making off with the child. Capt. Price of the Bronx Detective Bureau sent out forty detectives also, and for several hours the men scoured the Bronx to no purpose, while Mrs. Lane and her friends searched for the child.

It was enarly four hours after the kidnapping that Policeman Hintner saw a small girl pushing a go-cart along Third Avenue at 149th Street. He thought the baby looked like Mrs. Lane's child, of which a description had been sent out, and he questioned the little girl. She admitted that the baby was a strange one that she had found in front of a store, and just then Mrs. Anna Flaach of 3,608 Third Avenue, a friend of Mrs. Lane, came along and identified the infant.

The little girl, whom the policeman took to the Morrisania Station, said she was Mabel Holtzer, 12 years old, and that she came here from St. Louis on Sunday to visit her aunt, Mrs. Adolf Fink, of 3,622 Third Avenue. She said she was very fond of children, and seeing the little one alone had taken it for a walk. She took it into a moving picture show nearby, and all the time the whole Bronx police force was looking for her she was not more than three blocks from the place where she had taken the infant.

The little girl's mother said that her daughter had been arrested a month ago in St. Louis for picking up a baby in the streets, and that it seemed to be a mania with her to appropriate other people's children. The girl was sent to the Children's Society and will be arraigned in the Children's Court to-day.

LOEB'S POLICE NEED A NAME.

Collector Will No Longer Allow Them to be Called Watchmen.

The recently organized marine police force of the Customs Service at this port is to be reorganized on a three-platoon system, according to an announcement made yesterday by Collector Loeb. The organization for the enforcement of the revenue laws here will begin operations on July 15, and by that time the Collector will have settled upon an appropriate name for the new branch of the service.

Before Mr. Loeb went into office the marine policemen were designated as watchmen, but since the reorganization under William Lutz, former Chief of Police of Porto Rico, it has been thought that a new name was necessary. The name "watchman" is barred, and the Collector has equal objections to "customs marines" and "port police."

The present plan contemplates a force of 306 men, with a Deputy Surveyor as chief, assisted by a Captain, three Lieutenants, and as many roundsmen. A special committee is now at work formulating plans for the men who are to guard the steamship piers to prevent smuggling.

The central office for the new force is to be established on the first floor of the Barge Office at the Battery. The men will be graded in three divisions, the highest pay being $1,093 a year; second grade, $900, and third, $840.

WAR ON THIRD AVE. PLAN TO REORGANIZE

HEARING NEXT TUESDAY

Stockholders, Tort Creditors, and Service Board All Against Creating a Bigger Debt Than Before.

A fight will be made over the reorganization plan put out by the Bondholders' Committee for the Third Avenue Railroad. This became evident yesterday when Commissioners Willcox, Bassett, and Maltbie of the Public Service Commission met for the first hearing on the matter. Although the hearing was postponed until next Tuesday, attorneys for various stockholders made their intention to protest known, and it is understood that the commission itself, while no announcement of its attitude has been made yet, is not very favorably impressed with the terms of the proposed reorganization.

There were before the Commissioners yesterday John M. Bowers, counsel for the Third Avenue Reorganization Committee, of which William N. Wallace, President of the Central Trust Company, is Chairman; Lorenzo Semple of counsel for the Public Service Commission, Attorney Samuel D. Levy, representing the stockholders, and Frank and Joseph Schaeffer, representing other stockholders. Several other lawyers, whose appearances will not be recorded until the hearings are finally opened, had come to protest against the plan.

Commissioner Willcox announced that the procedure would be for the Reorganization Committee to submit its facts and figures first, and for the protestants to follow. Yesterday's protestants were mainly the representatives of stockholders, upon whom the reorganization plan places an assessment of $4,000,000 as an alternative to wiping out the $16,000,000 of stock now outstanding. Under the earnings of the Third Avenue road during the receivership there would be a deficit of approximately $1,000,000 on the interest requirements standing ahead of any return on this stock, old or new, according to the terms of the plan. Accordingly, many of the stockholders are not particularly impressed with that part of the proposal which has come from the Bondholders' Committee.

Another kind of protest which came to the Public Service Commission yesterday was from the Tort Creditors' Committee. This committee is now striving to assert its right to have the tort claims treated as claims growing directly out of operation, and hence ahead of the claims of bondholders before Judge Lacombe in the United States Court.

The same contention underlies the protest of the Public Service Commission. The protest cites the ruling of the commission and of the Supreme Court of the United States that damage claims must be classified and treated as operating expenses, and the fact that many of the claims which have produced $1,500,000 of unsatisfied judgments against the New York City Railway system were on account of accidents which happened on the Third Avenue line.

Then the tort creditors protest specifically against "authorizing an impecunious company to again enter the operation of the Third Avenue system without some satisfactory provision insuring the payment of such amounts as may from time to time be awarded"—referring to the tort claims. The protest is also against increasing the interest charges on the property even beyond the old figures, and the commission is asked, before allowing any reorganization plan to go through, to have a stipulation inserted in the mortgage whereby provision is to be made for tort claims and tort damages paid out of operating receipts before anything is paid on account of interest.

FAMILY PORTRAITS ENTOMBED

The old portraits of her father, mother, brother, two sisters, and herself went to the grave with Miss Sarah E. Maurice, 93 years old, last surviving member of the old Maurice family, famous throughout Long Island and old New York City years ago. She was buried in the family plot in Mount Olivet Cemetery, Maspeth, L. I., at sundown on Tuesday.

With her property all gone, all the immediate members of her own family buried years ago, and living an invalid for the last seven years, in her lucid moments Miss Maurice expressed the desire that the last few relics of her family might be buried with her when she died. Friends saw that this strange request was carried out.

Miss Maurice lived at 1 Hill Street, in the Maspeth section of Queens, and it was in that section during her younger days that her father, James Maurice, owned a large estate and entertained the aristocracy of the day. Gov. De Witt Clinton was his friend.

There were six children in the family, three sons and three daughters. They all grew up, but so strong was the family bond between them that they never married, and later in life they began dying off, one after another, until Sarah E. Maurice and her sister, Margaret J., were the only ones left. They lived alone in the big house in Hill Street.

About ten years ago burglars broke into the place and got away with about $2,000 worth of booty. The sisters never got over the shock, and not long afterward Margaret died.

WOMAN HURT IN RUNAWAY.

Mrs. Oliver Hart of 227 West 128th Street and Mrs. William Burns of 55 West 128th Street were driving in a light runabout behind a large bay horse last night when the animal became frightened at Riverside Drive and Seventy-eighth Street at a fire engine. The horse bolted, throwing Mrs. Hart out. Mrs. Hart jumped to her feet, hailed a passing taxicab, and instructed the driver to race after the runaway.

In the meantime Mrs. Burns had grabbed the reins. At Ninety-fourth Street and Amsterdam Avenue Policeman Davine tried to stop the horse, but the animal shied to one side and Mrs. Burns was thrown violently to the ground.

Mrs. Hart, in the taxicab, ordered the chauffeur to stop, and, taking Mrs. Burns in the car, drove to the J. Hood Wright Hospital. There it was said that Mrs. Burns had suffered a scalp wound and contusion, but was nto seriously injured.

At Ninety-seventh Street and Amsterdam Avenue Policeman Curtin grabbed the runaway's bridle and was dragged a block before he succeded in stopping the horse.

An Apology

THIS card went to our regular customers on Tuesday.

By an unfortunate blunder, the newspaper advertisement of the Sale was printed yesterday, instead of To-day.

This we exceedingly regret, and only hope that starting with so splendid a stock, no customer will find that the suit he so particularly wanted will have been sold in Wednesday's large business.

Come in to-day.
